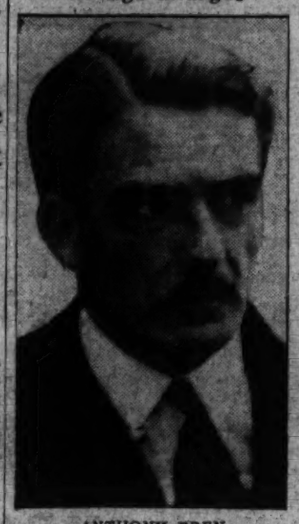
British Advocate Armed Sanctions In Any Invasion

First Pledge by Empire to Apply Penalties Universally.

Committee to Make Poison Gas Protest

Eden Says Italy Shipped 200 Tons of Chemical Via Suez Canal.

Brings Charges



ANTHONY EDEN.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Geneva, April 9.—Great Britain today, after revealing Italian gas shipments through the Suez Canal, persuaded the League of Nations Committee of Thirteen to appeal to the East African belligerents to avoid use of gas in the future.

Equaling League interest in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict was a statement by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden that henceforth if any League country invades the territory of another, Great Britain will advocate the application of sanctions—financial, economic and military.

Under Eden's insistent driving the committee today also:

1. Heard Wolde Mariam, Ethiopia's delegate to Geneva, indicate his government's readiness to discuss peace directly with Italy on condition that League members attend such conversations to guarantee the conduct of negotiations within the framework of the League.

2. Learned through an Eden announcement that Italy shipped 200 tons of gas through the Suez Cana to Ethiopia. He urged that both belligerents be asked to pledge themselves not to use gas in the future.

3. Heard that Mariam told Eden that Emperor Haile Selassie would die in battle rather than relinquish any of Ethiopia's rights as a member of the League of Nations.

4. Understood that the French and British delegates have agreed that after tomorrow's session the committee will adjourn until April 21, which would automatically become the deadline for a cessation of hostilities by Italy.

5. Received a report from its committee of jurists indicating the Committee of Thirteen—the Council minus Italy—is powerless to prevent Italian use of gas against the Ethiopians.

Renews Peace Efforts.

The committe convened today to renew its efforts to arrange an Italo-Ethiopian peace conference. Eden played the dominant role, continuing his effort to terminate gas warfare in East Africa and voicing Britain's determination to tolerate no further violations of the League Covenant.

Committee members, leaving the session, said that Eden's statement of his government's readiness to apply League penalties against aggressor nations represented the first time Britain has formally pledged herself to follow a uniform policy in cases of future aggression.

The statement, it was believed, was intended to correct the impression that Britain was supporting the Covenant only in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute because of selfish, imperialistic interests.

Wire Belligerents.

Following deliberation of charges of Italian use of gas the committee telegraphed both Italy and Ethiopia urging they respect all international conventions to which they are signatory and asking for assurances to calm public opinion.

The jurists who reported the Committee of Thirteen has no power to prevent Italians from gassing Ethiopians suggested that the signatories of the 1925 anti-gas convention might draw Italy's attention to her alleged violation of the pact.

Eden, expressing belief that the League Council could investigate charges of Italian gas attacks, urged an immediate investigation by any competent body. He said gas could have been used in the East African campaign only by orders of the Italian high command or the Italian government.

Japanese Slain By Red Troops In Border Fight

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, April 9.—Fresh border fighting between Soviet Russians and Japanese, in which a Japanese lieutenant was killed and five soldiers were listed as missing, was reported today by the Harbin, Manchukuo, correspondent of the Domei (Japanese) News Agency.

The report said the lieutenant, commanding a few men, was patroling a hilly section east of Suifenho when the group encountered 14 Russian soldiers.

The Russians, the dispatch added, were on Manchukuan territory and firing broke out. No other details were received.

Far East Tension Grows.

Tension in the Far East has mounted over a series of such cases, some along the Soviet-Manchukuo border and others along the Mongolian-Manchukuo frontier.

Russian newspapers today published a government note dismissing a Chinese protest against the mutual assistance pact between Soviet Russia and Outer Mongolia.

The government newspaper Izvestia charged that China made the protest under pressure from Japan. China claimed Mongolia is an integral part of China and that the treaty "appears to be a violation of the sovereignty of China and the Chinese-Soviet agreement of 1924."

"We have no doubt that the Chinese people will see the protest as a new proof of the helplessness of the Nanking government in the face of Japanese threats," said Izvestia.

"Incapable of defending the territory under its sovereignty, the Chinese government has already had witness of attacks against that territory by imperialistic robbers.

"Under these conditions, it should view the Soviet government's willingness to help Mongolia as a favor. The Chinese people are doubtlessly thankful that the Soviet will prevent Mongolia from becoming a victim of imperialistic robbery."

Japanese Threaten Russian.

Moscow, April 9 (AP).—Tass, official Soviet news agency, published a dispatch tonight saying its offices in Tokyo were invaded by four belligerent Japanese who, in the name "of the Japanese people," ordered the correspondent to leave the country.

The Japanese were declared to have addressed the Russian newspaperman in "menacing tones," accusing him of sending false information and being an enemy of Japan.

New Zeppelin Fights Winds On Way Home

French Pledge Aid if Needed; One Motor Reported Stalled.

38 Passengers Aboard With a Crew of 44; Ship Due Today.

By the Associated Press.

Paris (Friday), April 10.—The French air ministry reported last night Germany's new Zeppelin, the Hindenburg, had been battling motor trouble and head winds on her way home from South America, and early today French airports from Bordeaux to Marseilles were watching for the airship.

(Officials of the Zeppelin Co. in Berlin said the crew denied there was motor trouble but asserted that the route to Friedrichshafen had been shortened to enable the Hindenburg to arrive Friday afternoon instead of Saturday morning.)

(At Seville, Spain, the Tablada Aerdrome reported receipt of a message from the new German queen of the skies asking for weather reports at 9 p. m., G. M. T. (4 p. m., E. S. T.) last night.)

The latest word received in Paris was at 9 p. m., Greenwich time, when the Hindenburg sent word she was over Malaga, Spain, heading for the Rhone River Valley of France.

Reported All Well.

(The Condor syndicate, business agents for the Zeppelin in Rio de Janeiro, said the airship reported it had passed Malaga at 8:15 p. m., G. M. T., and that all was well.)

(A Reuters dispatch to London from Bordeaux, France, stated the latest information received there early this morning was that the Hindenburg was traveling 60 miles an hour against a strong wind and was believed to be heading for the Rhone Valley.)

(Both Seville and Malaga are farther along the route to Friedrichshafen than Gibraltar.)

France Grants Request.

Paris, April 9 (U.P.).—Limping at the greatly reduced speed of 50 knots, with one of her four engines stalled, the giant German dirigible Hindenburg, carrying 38 passengers and 44 crew, fought headwinds tonight on the last lap of the return flight of her maiden voyage to Rio de Janiero.

At the personal request of Premier Albert Sarraut the air ministry granted Capt. Ernst Lehmann, commanding the dirigible, permission to land on French soil or fly over France.

French airports and dirigible landing stations at Bordeaux, Toulon and in the Rhone Valley prepared to land the ship if necessary. Ground crews were standing by and landing fields were swept by floodlights.

French naval vessels in the Mediterranean stood by for a possible emergency.

Expected Today.

Zeppelin company officials believed the dirigible would continue to her Friedrichshafen hangar, where she is expected early tomorrow afternoon.

They hoped engine repairs could be made in midair but they were uncertain as to what route the Hindenburg would follow.

The French have instructed the dirigible to follow the old Graf Zeppelin route up the Rhone Valley if she flies over French soil.

The request for the Hindenburg to land in France caused fear of an impending dirigible disaster.

But Zeppelin company officials, despite the headwinds prevailing along the route, were confident the world's largest lighter-than-air craft would be able to land safely, either at Friedrichshafen or at any emergency station along the way.

Eckener Aboard.

They professed no fear of a disaster, pointing out that three engines are capable of propelling the Hindenburg. They pointed to the possibility that Lehmann, advised by Dr. Hugo Eckener, designer and builder of the Hindenburg, might repair his stalled engine aloft. Eckener is a passenger aboard the dirigible.

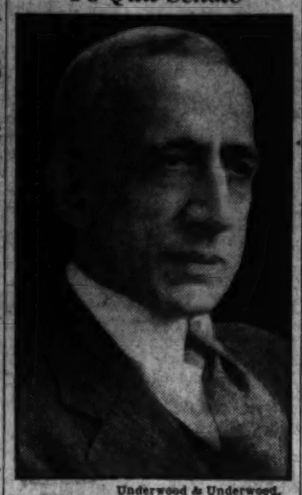
To Quit Senate



Underwood & Underwood.

EDWARD P. COSTIGAN.

Costigan Is Ill, Will Not Seek New Election

Colorado Senator Is Forced to Shun Work; to Go South for Health.

Senator Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, and one of the most pronounced liberals in the Senate, will not be a candidate for re-election this year, his office said last night in a surprise announcement.

Ill health was given as the reason for the decision. It was said that Senator Costigan is now in Florida suffering from exhaustion, and has been warned by physicians that to undertake the strain of a campaign would be perilous to his health.

The announcement by Lee F. Johnson, the Senator's secretary, said:

"Senator Costigan announced tonight that, due to ill health, he will not be a candidate for re-election to the United States Senate. His physicians have insisted that he take a prolonged rest."

Follows Struggle.

Retirement of Senator Costigan follows a protracted struggle between the liberal and conservative wings of the Democratic Party in Colorado for control. Gov. Ed C. Johnson, leader of the conservative element, is generally expected to run for Costigan's seat, and whether the liberals will select anyone to oppose him for the nomination was a matter of conjecture last night.

The Roosevelt Administration has been involved in the intraparty struggle in Colorado to the extent that Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, has been in the State for some weeks on a leave of absence, directing the Costigan forces in preparation for the September primary.

Antagonism between the Johnson and Costigan factions was intensified in 1934 when the liberal wing ran Josephine Roche against Johnson for the gubernatorial nomination. After her defeat by Johnson, she was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Treasury by President Roosevelt, the first woman member of the "Little Cabinet."

It has been reported that Gov. Johnson, in retaliation for her campaign against him, would run against Costigan for the senatorial nomination. Some circles expected announcement of his candidacy about April 1, but it was not forthcoming. There were reports that the Costigan forces were willing not to run anyone against Johnson for the gubernatorial nomination if he would remain out of the senatorial race. Johnson, however, never had agreed to such a plan.

Chapman May Race Johnson.

Under Chapman's direction, the Costigan supporters have been organized for the primary fight, and what effect the Senator's announcement of his retirement would have on their plans was not clear. It was suggested that perhaps Assistant Secretary Chapman would be put up against Johnson for the nomination to succeed Costigan, assuming the Governor does enter the senatorial race.

In Denver last night Gov. Johnson told the Associated Press:

"I deeply regret to learn of the illness of Senator Costigan. I have nothing further to say."

He declined to say whether he would seek Costigan's seat.

The liberal group in the Senate, and the Administration as well, will be losing one of their hardest working allies when Costigan retires.

Starting his political activity as a Republican, he followed Theodore Rooseveit in the Bull Moose campaign in 1912. Later he became a supporter of Woodrow Wilson and

Sibley Assails Political Grip On Business

U.S. Chamber Head Says 'Pillorying' of Industry Must Stop.

He Calls on Industrial Leaders to Ignore Party Lines.

Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, called upon businessmen last night to confront politicians, without regard to party, with the demand that "pillorying of business be stopped forthwith and not attempted further."

Speaking over a national radio hookup, Sibley asserted that "business has been seized upon as the handy whipping boy of politics."

"Our national welfare is staked upon the successful carrying on of business," he said. "That is the thing which seems to be forgotten by those who stand on the sidelines and criticize.

"The relationships between business activities and the Government intimately affect all of us. The degree to which Government regulates or controls or restricts the actions of citizens in their honorable pursuit of lawful occupations has a profound influence upon every home, every job, every wage, and upon the life of every person who works for a living."

Prejudices Aroused.

Sibley said that in few fields have misrepresentations aroused more bitter prejudices and hurtful class antagonisms.

"In few kinds of legislation," he continued, "have such prejudices and antagonisms harvested more dragon's teeth in the form of hasty and unwise laws, cumbersome restriction of legitimate enterprise, agitation of needless industrial strife, dislocation of markets for goods and crops, and the heaping of still further burdens of taxes and public debt upon the backs of those already straining to make ends meet."

He declared the purpose of all this was to give some political party a momentary advantage, "to enable some office seeker to gain publicity as an embattled 'friend of the people,' to enable some Government bureau to invent a new duty by which to perpetuate its existence and thus strengthen and enlarge its grip upon the public treasury."

Some Abuses.

Sibley said responsible businessmen realize there have been some abuses by business, but he said they more than anyone else want to see these things corrected. But, he said, efforts to improve business are far different from "frenzied witchburning" by politicians.

"The very real problems of today do not lend themselves to those familiar tricks of the political stump without endangering at the same time the means of livelihood of all of us."

He declared that by drawing upon surpluses and by borrowing, business enterprises have kept more than 1,000,000 men at work whose services and products were not immediately needed.

Sibley charged politicians with deliberating attempting to drive a wedge between employers and employes. He asserted that tranquility, peace and contentment are the only conditions which pay the politicians no dividends.

Without Regard to Party.

"Business without regard to party must confront politics without regard to party, and say that misrepresentation of the enterprises which are lawful, and the pillorying of businesses which give the people of the country their livelihood, must be stopped forthwith and not attempted further," he said. "Business must serve notice, once and for all, that it will not again be the sparrow which meekly submits to being picked to death by the political crows.

"Businessmen and their organizations, and all those who earn their living by productive work rather than by the subtle exercise of the political arts, must set themselves resolutely against political exploitations of business, by any party, by any candidate, by any campaigner."

$410,000,000 Program To Electrify 1,000,000 Farms Voted By House

Measure Would Finance Plants, Installation for Consumers.

Rankin Loses Fight For Merit System

A $410,000,000 rural electrification program, designed to carry electric power to 1,000,000 farms in the next ten years, yesterday was approved by the House over Republican opposition, without a record vote.

Carrying the Administration's approval, the bill already has passed the Senate in different form, and now goes back for adjustment of differences. The Senate bill made an additional $10,000,000 available.

Trimmed down at the President's behest from the $1,000,000,000 originally proposed by Senator George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska, the bill would establish the present temporary Rural Electrification Administration as a permanent undertaking.

Loans would be made to persons, corporations, including private power companies, co-operative associations, States, municipalities or other public bodies, for development of generating plants and transmission lines to supply rural homes not now receiving central station service.

Finance Installation.

A second type of loan would finance wiring of consumers' premises, and acquistion and installation of electric and plumbing appliances. Money would be made immediately available by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation — $50,000,000 the first year, and $40,000,000 would be appropriated annually for the nine years thereafter.

Leading House Republican opposition to the bill, Representative James W. Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, sought to limit electrification loans to 85 per cent of the value of a project, and fought to cut down the term of office of the rural electrification administrator from 10 to 5 years. Both of his amendments were defeated. Just before final passage, a vote to recommit the bill to scale down the administrator's term of office was forced by Wadsworth, but it was defeated, 92 to 44.

Representative Schuyler Merritt (Republican), of Connecticut, who with Wadsworth is a minority member of the Interstate Commerce Committee which sponsored the bill, joined in the fight to modify.

Rankin Loses Fight.

Several House changes from the Senate-approved measure aroused the antagonism of Representative John Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, who vainly attempted to substitute a Senate provision applying TVA nonpartisan and merit standards to the rural electrification administration. He lost on a 60-to-60 tie vote.

Rankin also protested House provisions for loans to corporations, which he charged would enable private power companies to gain control of the benefits. Again his amendment was defeated, this time by a 49-to-60 vote.

Sponsoring the bill on the floor, Chairman Sam Rayburn, of the Interstate Commerce Committee, co-author of the public utility holding company act, declared he was opposed to "socialization" of the power industry, and professed belief it should remain in private hands. He denied there is any idea of "punishing anybody" by paralleling private power lines.

"What we are interested in is rural electrification—a little more comfort and a little more happiness for the people out there on the farms," he said.

Loans for development of needed generating plants and electric transmission lines would be self-liquidating over a period not to exceed 25 years, bearing interest of not more than 3 per cent. The administrator would be required to see that security was "reasonably adequate" and find some assurance that the loan would be repaid.

Rayburn insisted in the House there would be more than 75 per cent recovery on all loans made.

There are said to be 6,800,000 farms in the United States, 6,000,000 of which are not receiving central station service. The House was told that the $410,000,000 made available would enable 1,000,000 of these farms to be reached with electric current.

Fifty per cent of available funds would be allotted annually by the Political Use of Relief Funds In Pennsylvania Is Charged

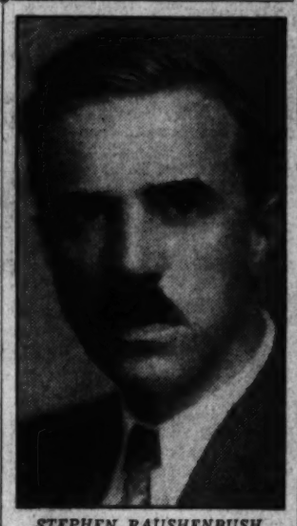
Circulars Mailed With Workers' Pay, Says Raushenbush.

By Felix Bruner.

While Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, was telling a House committee yesterday that part of a proposed $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation will be used for projects commonly termed "boondoggling," a former Senate committee investigator was charging that Hopkins was "unable or unwilling" to investigate charges that relief funds have been used for political purposes in Pennsylvania.

The charges concerning Pennsylvania politics were made by Stephen Raushenbush, head of the Pennsylvania Security League and until February chief investigator for the Senate Munitions Committee, headed by Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota. Raushenbush charged, among other things, that Edward N. Jones, Pennsylvania WPA administrator, had placed printed attacks against Raushenbush in pay envelopes of 100,000 relief workers.

Raushenbush said that he had made a number of complaints to Hopkins by telegraph and by letter and that his complaints had been ignored. At Hopkins' office it was said that nothing was known of the complaints. Raushenbush produced the statement which he said Jones had put in the pay envelopes and had sent out in franked envelopes, together with a letter he wrote to Hopkins on April 2.



STEPHEN RAUSHENBUSH.

Hopkins told the House committee he was unfamiliar with the Raushenbush charges, but that he would investigate them fully. He also promised to inquire into charges made in Massachusetts by Joseph B. Grossman, Republican

Food, Shelter Given Jobless In Hill March

Members of Congress Aid in Raising Funds After WPA Plea Fails.

Food and shelter for 200 penniless, jobless delegates to the Workers Alliance convention were provided last night with funds contributed by members of Congress and private sources following a "hunger march" on the Capitol, where the unemployed besieged the offices of their respective Senators and Representatives and milled through the House corridors for more than three hours.

An attempt to obtain a $1,000 emergency appropriation to feed and house the destitute delegates was made by Representative Boileau (Progressive), of Wisconsin, but was blocked before the resolution could be introduced, by parliamentary tactics that forced immediate adjournment of the House until Monday.

Angered by the blocking of the resolution, Representatives Boileau and Marcantonio, liberal Republican of New York, ran out into the House corridor, grabbed David Lasser, leader of the convention, by the arm and, without waiting to don either hats or coats, hailed a taxicab and drove to the office of WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins.

It was 6 p. m. Hopkins was gone for the day, but Deputy Administrator Aubrey Williams received the visitors. For some two hours, Boileau and Marcantonio argued with Williams urging him to take a "liberal interpretation" of the law forbidding the expenditures of Federal funds to aid conventions, on the basis of which the WPA has refused to assist the jobless delegates.

Williams called upon the legal and financial advisers of the WPA, District officials, lawyers in the Attorney General's office, and attempted to reach some of the "Brains Trust" lawyers who, it was felt, would be most likely to find a loophole in the law. The "Brain Trusters" could not be reached while the other legal experts said they thought the "anti-convention" spending restriction binding.

Williams then contacted the various lodging houses in the District

Corporate Tax Bill Sent Back For Revisions

House Committee's Action to Delay Program, Cut Expected Revenues.

By Robert C. Albright.

Further revenue slashes in the Administration's $799,000,000 tax program appeared imminent last night as the House ways and Means Committee turned back to a subcommittee a series of recommendations that left tax yields uncertain, and threatened to delay a report on the bill another 10 days.

The sub-committee, headed by Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), of Washington, was instructed to prepare the first formal draft of a bill and to modify corporate tax formulas to provide some relief for companies with outstanding debts.

This change, sharply opposed by Treasury experts, but modestly meeting some business complaints, will mean an indefinite scaling down of present yield estimates. Although the committee has looked elsewhere to replace it, about the only recoupment found to date has been some $8,000,000 in revenue expected to be picked up from taxing dividends paid out by banks.

Eyeing House revenue curtailments with interest, some Senate Finance Committee members are known to be considering reviving the $221,000,000 processing tax proposals originally made by President Roosevelt, but flatly rejected by the House group. Return of President Roosevelt to the White House today, and probable informal conferences with leaders in the next few

Offer of Ear Muffs Declined by Glass

Ear stoppers won't keep the city noises of the National Capital from disturbing the sleep of the white-haired Senator Glass, of Virginia. He won't give them a chance.

Yesterday he scornfully rejected ten wads of pink cotton sent him by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, because of his complaints against the noises in the vicinity of the Raleigh Hotel, where the Virginia Senator has resided for 20-odd years.

Senator Glass recently demanded that the District Commissioners enforce local ordinances against undue noises, and he cited the cries of a newsboy beneath his hotel window and the frequent blowing of sirens by ambulance drivers and firemen.

"I don't mind their blowing 'em when they're going places," he explained yesterday, "but I do object to them shrieking full blast when they're coming back.

"I've been trying to figure out why they blow them so much," he added, "and I think I know—firemen must have inferiority complexes."

Health Officer Ruhland's letter to the Senator, said in part:

"May I, as one who is much interested in noise abatement, submit something which I have personally found to be rather satisfactory in dealing with this problem? . . . I hope that its use may also bring the desired relief."

"If he's joking," chirped Glass, "all right, but if he's serious then he certainly hurled an indictment against conditions here."

By the Associated Press.

New Melbourne, Newfoundland, April 9.—An 8-year-old girl, lost in the forest 12 days, recounted in Perlican Hospital today how she had lain down to sleep like the "babes in the woods," expecting never to waken.

The child, Lucy Harris, endured hunger, rain, snow and frost during the days the whole neighborhood was looking for her, but hospital authorities said that, although dangerously weakened by the ordeal, she would survive. Her hands and feet were frozen and she probably will be maimed for life.

"I wasn't lonely or afraid because the birds sang," she whispered in a weak voice from her little white hospital bed where she had been carried on an improvised stretcher by her uncle, Chesley Harris, and a group of searchers who found her two days ago.

They had never expected to find her alive. Her feeble cry "Hello! I'm the little girl that's lost," startled them on the twelfth day of the search. Harris looked under a tree and there, kneeling on the ground, was his niece.

"I'm too weak to walk a step," she said. A doctor was summoned and helped the men carry her out of the woods, after applying restoratives.

Lucy told how she had eaten snow, the only "food" she could find, and when darkness came she made a nest for herself under a tree. One day she heard the searchers in the distance, but was too weak to call out to them or reach them.

On March 26 she set out with her 6-year-old sister to go fishing. When Lucy found the river too deep to cross she sent her sister home and struck out for herself. Unmissed until 8 o'clock that night, the alarm was given then. Two hundred searchers combed the woods daily in hopes they would find her. Lucy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Harris.

Cold Rain Amazes Official Forecasters

Even the most experienced weather forecasters were amazed when they awoke yesterday to find Washington snuffling in a cold rain following a Weather Bureau prediction of "fair and warmer."

When the bureau made its prediction officials took lightly a disturbance reported above the Gulf of Mexico. A few veteran forecasters thought the disturbance might bring rain as far north as North Carolina. None thought it would move rapidly enough to reach Washington.

Weather Bureau officials were besieged with inquiries yesterday from persons planning week-end trips. The week-enders received little encouragement when told that, although considerable doubt prevails regarding Saturday, the rain will continue at least through today. The temperature today, however, will be slightly higher than yesterday.

Southwest 'Penitentes' Suffer Tortures of Calvary in Rites

By the Associated Press.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., April 9.—Strong young men, solemn in agony, staggered beneath the weight of rough-hewn crosses tonight as the penitentes of the Southwest re-enacted in dreadful detail the ordeal of Christ's march to Calvary.

Their muscular backs were caked with the gore of repeated lashings. Their heads were bowed under crowns of cactus thorn. The bitter cold of mountain fastnesses quickly congealed the blood which dripped from their stone-lacerated bare feet.

But they made no outcry, and struggled against any sign of weakness. By reaching the summit of El Calvario, they would prove themselves worthy of the highest honor their cult can bestow—worthy "Cristos" of the Brothers of the Blood of Christ.

Behind them trailed a strange procession, the rank and file of members of Los Hermanos de Sangre Cristo. Some of these were flagellants, scourging themselves with thorn-studded whips until their blood flecked the late spring snow for yards around.

Others came, piping an eerie accompaniment on their "piteros." Bringing up the rear were the women and children, wailing, moaning, moved by a strange fanaticism they could not understand.

In lonely mountain valleys of southern Colorado, and in secret foothill hideaways of New Mexico these ceremonies were performed.

Sharp-eyed lookouts, armed with rifles, were on guard so that the sacredness of these rites would not be witnessesd by the uninitiate.

Needless Delay Is Laid to Roper On Safety at Sea

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.—Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper was accused tonight for the second time in 24 hours of delay in acting to increase safety at sea.

The new criticism was made in a letter from Billings Wilson, chairman of the sub-committee on hazardous cargoes of the fire prevention committee of the American Association of Port Authorities.

Wilson wrote Secretary Roper the Department of Commerce was authorized by act of Congress last August to promulgate regulations so safeguard life and property on oil tankers, but that no action had yet been taken.

Blames Copeland.

Last night Howard S. Cullman, vice chairman of the National Committee on Safety at Sea, made public a letter to Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, chairman of the committee on commerce, charging him and Secretary Roper with unnecessary delay in studying the maritime labor problems as it applies to safety.

Wilson's letter said:

"A total of 12 lives have been lost in six catastrophes to boats engaged in handling dangerous cargoes since the passage of H. R. 8598 last August, which legislation authorized and directed you to promulgate rules and regulations for vessels used in the transportation of dangerous cargoes 'in order to preserve life and property while in operation or at anchor.'

"In a co-operative effort to assist your department in this purpose, and with the approval of the director, Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection, the National Fire Protection Association appointed a technical committee to formulate suggested regulations for oil tankers.

Asks Justice to Crews.

"On February 14 last, a final draft of recommendations was submitted to Director Weaver, with a request that they be made effective at an early date. Almost two months have elapsed and we are still waiting the issuance of these regulations, which we understand are now resting with your solicitor.

"In the interest of safety to life and property in our harbors and in justice to crews of such tankers, who are surely entitled to the protection afforded by the proposed regulations, we urgently request your assistance and ask that they be promulgated without further delay."

Cullman today urged a Congressional investigation into the fundamental labor problems of American shipping.

Senate resolutions called for such an investigation after the Mohawk and Morro Castle disasters. Cullman said in a letter to Senator Copeland.

The group of which Cullman is an official was appointed at the suggestion of President Roosevelt.

Meanwhile Capt. Gregory Cullen, master of the Dollar liner President Garfield, was in port today with a story of trouble with members of the crew and "a radical spy system, a veritable Russian Cheka," which he said held sway on his ship.

Cullen said he refused to bring two members of the "Black Gang," or engine room crew, any further than Genoa on the ship's round-the-world cruise, and left another man behind for insubordination. A fourth member of the crew, he said, was put ashore in Italy and sent to a channel port for passage to New York on another liner.

Cullen said he dropped the fourth member of the crew to protect him from radical enemies aboard the ship.

Labor Tactics Blamed.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Capt. Walter J. Petersen, member of the National Committee on Safety at Sea and representative of three Pacific shipowners' associations, last night blamed what he termed "guerilla" union tactics for reported insubordination aboard American merchant ships.

However, Commerce Department officials said it was impossible to fix the blame for the unprecedented number of interruptions in ship operations pending a "thorough" investigation.

"Some incidents may be the fault of the operators," pointed out Joseph B. Weaver, director of the department's Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection.

Petersen said he believed the Commerce Department's inquiry would reveal that most of the growing number of crew disputes were fostered by the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, rank-and-file organization of seamen and littoral workers.

Weaver is preparing an analysis for Secretary of Commerce Roper on the "between 300 and 500" cases of alleged insubordination during the last year reported to him by steamboat companies. He said it was unfair to assume that crews were at fault until the reports have been studied and verified.

"All we know," Weaver said, "is that we are having stoppage of vessels and delays in sailing. This may be the fault of the masters or the operators or the crews. We won't know anything until we have completed our report. All I can say is that they are probably due to labor difficulties."

Politics and People

Hoover Seeks Bloc of Delegates to Give Him Hand in Coming G. O. P. Convention.

By Franklyn Waltman

Throughout the Middle West, as probably elsewhere, there is keen curiosity as to former President Herbert Hoover's intentions in regard to the Republican Presidential nomination this year. Efforts to formulate an answer to the question by making inquiries among Mr. Hoover's friends and Republican leaders was not wholly satisfactory.

WALTMAN

Most of those interrogated on this question lean to the view that Mr. Hoover has abandoned any idea of obtaining a renomination, although such may have been his intention when he started out last fall making a monthly speech hitting at the New Deal. The country's reception of Mr. Hoover, despite the commendable change in his style of speeches, has been chilly, if not cold.

But at the same time there has been an abundance of evidence that Mr. Hoover is in the market for convention delegates. He has not gone out to get State delegations committed to him, but he is represented as anxious to have at least two or three delegates from each State, making a bloc of 100 or more, willing to vote for him on at least the first ballot.

And it is entirely possible Mr. Hoover may realize this objective. In virtually every State there are a few prominent Republicans, eligible to go to the Cleveland convention, with a warm spot in their hearts for the former President. Some held office in his administration. Others are under obligation to him for past favors.

Most of these Hoover friends are sufficiently practical to realize that his name is synonymous with disaster in the public mind and that he stands no chance of being nominated. But they are willing to make a gesture to please him. Many of these friends now are seeking to go to the convention as uninstructed delegates. For instance, former Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde wishes to be a delegate from Missouri. The Landon leaders there were glad to have him, but they insisted that he be bound by instructions to support the Kansan. Mr. Hyde demurred; the Landon leaders were adamant, and at the last minute Mr. Hyde withdrew his name from the district caucus.

Those who believe Mr. Hoover has abandoned hope of being renominated explain his apparent anxiety to have some delegate support in the convention on the ground that he wishes to be a factor—a major factor, if he can arrange it—in picking the party's Presidential candidate and in formulating the Republican platform. Unless there is a Hoover bloc in the convention, this aim cannot be achieved, it is contended.

Mr. Hoover, it is argued, has only one objective, and that is to do everything within his power to defeat President Roosevelt. Overthrow of the New Deal would be regarded by him as vindication. Mr. Hoover, in denying that he was seeking to organize opposition to Gov. Alf M. Landon, has just said that "my preoccupation is solely to present to the country the issues involved in the New Deal."

Whether Mr. Hoover has taken affirmative steps to stop Gov. Landon might be disputed, but he certainly has been cool to the aspirations of the Kansan, and some of the former President's intimates have joined the anti-Landon whispering campaign. But on the other hand, some of the ablest and most prominent figures in the Hoover regime now are enthusiastically supporting Gov. Landon.

* * *

Irrespective of Mr. Hoover's intentions, his prospects for renomination are remote. Evidence of this can be found on every side. The Republicans will turn to any one of half a dozen men before they will again name Mr. Hoover as their standard-bearer. Indeed, to have Mr. Hoover's enmity is counted an asset, while his support is regarded by Republications as a heavy liability.

* * *

One reason why aspirants for the Republican nomination are vague when it comes to suggesting alternatives for New Deal measures they condemn is that they do not wish to get out on a limb before the convention agrees on a platform. The views of diverse elements within the party must be considered and undoubtedly there will have to be some compromises. But this will not necessarily result in a flabby, meaningless platform.

One platform plank which the Republicans will have no difficulty writing will be that dealing with New Deal spending and extravagance. All elements of the party seem agreed that the profligacy of the Roosevelt Administration should be condemned severely. Indeed, that plank may be already written.

Some Middle Western Republicans are starting a movement to have the party place in its platform this year a plank from the Republican platform adopted at Chicago in 1860. It reads:

"That the people justly view with alarm the reckless extravagance which pervades every department of the Federal Government; that a return to rigid economy and accountability is indispensable to arrest the systematic plunder of the public treasury by favored partisans; while the recent startling developments of frauds and corruptions at the Federal metropolis, show that an entire change of administration is imperatively demanded."

Except for the phrase regarding "frauds and corruptions at the Federal metropolis" this plank fits perfectly the present situation, the Republicans contend, and it could be used with little revision.

* * *

A plank over which the Republicans will have difficulty, however, will be that dealing with the tariff. A great change of thought has developed in some sections of the Republican Party regarding the tariff. The Hull reciprocal tariff program is lauded by many Republicans—but it also is assailed by others, notably Senator William E. Borah.

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Republican chairman of the Tariff Commission and for many years an editor of note, has projected with convincing arguments his idea of how the Republican tariff plank should read. Reminding his party colleagues that "old-fashioned tariff bills helped wreck the Taft and Hoover Administrations, Mr. O'Brien urges the Republicans to indorse the Hull reciprocal trade mechanism and promise to maintain and improve it. The tariff question, he asserts, must be approached "in a spirit of broad statesmanship, and not in slavish devotion to outworn slogans."

* * *

Republican epithets are coming back to haunt them. Republican orators have referred to President Roosevelt as "the man on the flying trapeze." Republican National Chairman Henry P. Fletcher yesterday was trying to hold a press conference when his voice was drowned out by an organ grinder playing "The Man on the Flying Trapeze." Holding his head Mr. Fletcher muttered: "That's what we've got to meet."

Jury to Study 'Price-Fixing' In Oil Industry

Cummings, Joining Ickes and Wallace in Drive, Orders Inquiry.

Two more Cabinet members, Attorney General Homer Cummings and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, yesterday aligned themselves with Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace in the Administration's battle on price-fixing in industry.

Cummings ordered a special grand jury investigation of charges of price-fixing in the oil industry, saying preliminary investigation had uncovered "enough evidence to justify further investigation."

Ickes, renewing his blasts at firms making identical bids on Government contracts, said 20 companies making insulating cable had given "prima facie evidence of collusion" in submitting identical bids for cable to be delivered at Boulder Dam. He awarded the $104,481 dam contract to a Boston firm because it was "located farthest from Boulder Dam" and more transportation work would be provided by it receiving the award.

Early in the week Secretary Wallace had issued a "cease-and-desist" order demanding that 11 of the Nation's largest meat-packing companies halt price-fixing, territory-apportionment and related practices.

May Be Held in Michigan.

The special grand jury to study the oil situation probably will be called in an unnamed Michigan city. Cummings approved the further investigation ten days ago, he said, as a result of preliminary studies made by the Justice Department's antitrust division.

Cummings indicated that the grand jury investigation did not necessary means filing of charges against anyone.

His announcement was hailed by Paul Hadlick, secretary of the oil marketers association, as "a hopeful message for the thousands of independent oil jobbers whose economic existence is threatened by those practices . . . During recent years the independent jobber has been continually squeezed between the pegged price at which he must buy from the refiner and the maintenance, through refiner-controlled outlets, of retail prices which do not leave the independent an adequate margin of profit."

Secretary Ickes, smiling wryly, announced he had accepted the $835,159 bid of the Republic Portland Cement Co. of San Antonio, Tex., for the contract to supply cement to construct the Arnold Dam, and to complete the Hamilton Dam on the Colorado River in Texas. He stressed the point that four identical cost bids were received by the Bureau of Reclamation.

Other bidders were the Universal Atlas Cement Co., the Trinity Portland Cement Co., and the Lone Star Cement Co.

Speaking of these identical bids, as well as of the 20 identical offers for the cable job at Boulder Dam, Ickes said ironically:

"It's a modern wonder how bidders can figure every cost the same. What's become of the old slogans about 'initiative" and 'the best man winning?' It seems that no manufacturer is any clever than any other—none of them can produce at a slightly lower cost.

"I wonder if they're not all Socialists.

"When 20 companies in cities as far apart as Los Angeles, Calif.; Butte, Montana; Denver, Colo., and Boston, Mass., submit identical bids—there is prima facie evidence of collusion.

"No person is so naive as to believe that this is coincidence or even friendly collaboration."

Lobby Inquiry To Hear Farm Council Today

Schwellenbach Says Group Is Connected With Liberty League.

Another anti-New Deal organization, this time a group opposed to the Administration farm program, will be subjected to examination by the Senate Lobby Committee today. The organization is the Farmers Independence Council.

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, a member of the committee, said it would be shown that the organization is connected with the American Liberty League, but Liberty League officials denied this. The committee already has revealed that Lammont du Pont, big Liberty League donor, has given the farmers' group $3,000.

The committee ran into some difficulty in obtaining the appearance of Stanley F. Morse, of Chicago, executive vice president of the council. Morse insisted that he would not appear unless subpenaed. Chairman Black said that a subpena would be issued. First witness today will be Dr. E. V. Wilcox, Washington representative of the organization.

Meanwhile, it was indicated the committee may have trouble getting through the House a resolution asking for $10,000 to pay legal expenses growing out of suits filed against the committee, particularly those filed by William Randolph Hearst, publisher, who charged his private telegrams had been seized.

House opposition was explained by the fact that the lobby committee had caught some House members in its dragnet. It revealed recently that six Representatives had been living with a utility lobbyist and that numerous others had attended parties given by the lobbyist.

On another occasion the Senate committee engaged in a violent dispute with the House Rules Committee, also investigating lobbying, over possession for examination purposes of Howard C. Hopson, dominant figure in the Associated Gas and Electric Company. The Senate committee charged that House committee employes had aided Hopson in escaping a Senate summons.

Political Circular Held Mailed

member of Gov. Curley's executive council, that the Democratic Administration was requiring Massachusetts citizens to "sacrifice their honest convictions" politically to obtain relief employment. Grossman made public a letter purporting to instruct a relief applicant to have his party designation changed to Democratic.

Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, through whom Jones was appointed, insisted he knew nothing of Raushenbush or of the Security League. Raushenbush said the league has 125,000 members in Pennsylvania, many of them relief workers.

"Jones has done a swell job," said Guffey. "He is a good executive and has a good organization. I recommended his appointment and I am very proud of the recommendation."

Hopkins Gives Breakdown.

Hopkins gave the House Appropriations sub-committee a partial breakdown of proposed expenditure of relief money. He said that out of $1,500,000,000, $525,000,000 would be used for roads, including $250,000,000 for farm-to-market roads. Another $175,00,000 would go for waterworks and sewers. A total of $75,000,000 would be used for county and municipal buildings, including schools.

This breakdown totals $875,000,000, leaving $625,000,000 for numerous other types of projects, including what some committee members called "boondoggling." In addition, the relief administration will have $1,128,000,000 from old funds which have not been obligated but most of which have been earmarked for various types of projects.

Raushenbush described the Pennsylvania Security League as being composed of "labor, liberal and unemployed" members. It has been in existence since 1932. He claimed that its principal purpose was obtaining social security legislation and that by publishing a paper called the Pennsylvania Black News, carrying records of legislators, it had succeeded in electing a number of friendly members of the Legislature, "Black News," he said, meant sad or bad news.

Jones also publishes a weekly political paper called We the People, said Raushenbush. This undertaking is in addition to his WPA job.

"It's a good newspaper," Senator Guffey said.

The squabble with Jones, according to Raushenbush, started when some WPA workers were told they could either give up their memberships in the Security League or lose their jobs. He said the league also had sought pay increases for relief workers in Bedford County. He said workers were told they would get the increases if they left the league.

Raushenbush said a set of affidavits concerning the situation was sent to Hopkins early in February. He said when there was no action a complaint was sent to the WPA labor advisory board of WPA. He said there were no results except the discharge from WPA jobs of some of the more active members of the league.

The former committee investigator said that his activities had no connection with the demand of Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, for a relief investigation. He said when he started making his complaints he did not know Davis was interested in an investigation.

Meanwhile, the Senate committee on audit and control which has before it the Davis resolution asking for an investigation still had not acted. Previously it had been explained that the committee had not met because of the absence from the city of Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, a member of the committee. Tydings returned yesterday, but Chairman Byrnes said he had not called a meeting and would not call one this week.

Here are excerpts from the circular which Rausenbush says Jones included in the pay envelopes:

"So Mr. Raushenbush is back in town!

"Isn't he the gentleman who undertook to smear the memory of Woodrow Wilson in the recent munitions investigation, and who let J. Pierpont Morgan emerge from the inquiry with one nice coat of whitewash?

"And the same person whom the Pinchots put on the State pay roll?"

(Raushenbush was once a Pennsylvania CWA official.)

Referring to Raushenbush and to one of his associates, Harold J. Ruttenberg, the circular said they were "put out because I will not instruct all PWA directors to compel all relief workers to join their outfit, which when completely organized is to be transformed over night into a third political party."

Take Off Whiskers.

"If Mr. Raushenbush is so concerned over the lot of the relief workers as he professes to be, I would like to ask him where he was when his friend and political godfather, Gifford Pinchot, was paying relief workers, not a security wage but an hourly wage that amounted to, even when the sun shone regularly, $10 a month less than the lowest security wages. You may as well take off your whiskers, Mr. Raushenbush, you are not fooling anyone. You are not interested in the lot of the relief workers.

Dr. Cook Is Denied New 'Pole' Inquiry

New York, April 9 (U.P.).—The American Geographic Society has refused to reopen investigation of the claims of Dr. Frederick A. Cook that he discovered the North Pole in 1908, it was announced tonight. Dr. Cook demanded the inquiry to clear doubt cast on his claim.

The council of the society, headed by President Roland L. Redmond, indicated that tremendous cost of an investigation and lack of funds would prohibit a reconsideration.

Wife Innocent In Wreck Plot, Husband Says

By the Associated Press.

Pensacola, Fla., April 9.—As authorities moved today to press new charges against a housewife, her admitted suitor and two Negroes accused of plotting to wreck a train on which her husband was engineer, the husband steadfastly prepared to defend her.

Escambia County authorities charge the four planned to wreck the train, a Louisville & Nashville passenger run, so she and her suitor might collect $2,000 in life insurance and be free to wed.

Even as County Solicitor Richard Merritt announced he was preparing to charge the four with a "much more serious crime" than that of conspiracy on which they are now held, the husband, R. W. Vann, of Ferry Pass, refused to believe his wife guilty and said he would try to arrange $5,000 bond for her release.

The engineer said he would take the steps as soon as he returned from his run from here to Flomation, Ala., tonight.

Affair Is Doubted.

He also said he did not believe a statement by the other man, Earl Travis, a Castleberry, Ala., carpenter, that he had been having an affair with Mrs. Vann.

Sheriff H. E. Gandy and railroad police looked into new points of the case today, but declined to discuss them. The sheriff continued to hold two Negroes, Allen Langston, 70, and Allen Finley, 16, whom he quoted as confessing two attempts to wreck Vann's train on a curve near Cantonment, Fla.

Despite the Negroes' claim that Mrs. Vann paid them $50 and promised them "possibly $500 more" if they did a good job of wrecking the train, both the wife and Travis denied any knowledge of a plot to kill the husband.

Held in $5,000 Bond.

Bond for the Alabama carpenter, who is several years younger than Mrs. Vann, and for the Negroes was set at $5,000 each. All three men and Mrs. Vann still were in jail tonight.

Mrs. Vann, who was arrested yesterday on her fortieth birthday, has a grown daughter by a previous marriage. Vann, 70-year-old railroad veteran of huge build, also had been married once before. He sat with his arm about his wife while county authorities questioned her and Travis.

About 25 passengers and other members of the crew were on the train with Engineer Vann both times the Negroes said they attempted to wreck it.

Justice Department Aids Face Lay-Off

By the Associated Press.

The Justice Department, after being snowed under for years, is now making such progress in settling cases that employes an offices in the Veterans War Risk Insurance Litigation Division are to be reduced.

In requesting $750,000 for annual expenses—$100,000 less than last year—in the appropriations bill now before Congress, W. G. Beardsley, the bureau's director, disclosed that for the first time settlements were rapidly wiping out accumulated cases. He also said new suits were tapering off.

After this June, Beardsley said, temporary employes will be released, and divisional offices in at least two States, Texas and Idaho, will be closed.

The Veterans Insurance Litigation Bureau reported that 3,007 cases were settled during the past year, saving the Government more than $35,000,000 in compromises and cases won, while 654 new suits were filed.

Slush Fund Inquiry Is Ordered in Ohio

Columbus, Ohio, April 9 (AP).—Reports of unlawful solicitations of Ohio civil service employes for political campaign contributions brought a demand from the Attorney General's office today for a State-wide investigation.

Attorney General John Bricker called for an immediate investigation of the reports and threatened criminal action to prevent violation of the civil service laws. Copies of his letter were sent to prosecutors of the 88 counties.

Bricker, unopposed for the Republication nomination for Governor, said he acted on reports that officials and workers had been asked to contribute sums ranging from $3 to $50 to a political "war chest."

Neither Gov. Martin L. Davey nor Ed D. Schorr, Republican State chairman, commented immediately, but Democratic State Chairman Francis W. Poulson said, "no demands have been made on any State employe, classified or nonclassified. If they want to contribute they may. No persuasion, no pressure, no threats and no demands have been made."

Science Holds Bag as Drunks Hold Drinks for Science's Sake

Two Don't Go Home Until Morning After Police Finance Bout to Test Intoxication Detector; But Reporters Leave on Own Legs.

By the United Press.

Cleveland, April 9.—Four men stood beside a white table in a hospital emergency room tonight and drank themselves into giggles, hilarity and finally slumber—all for the sake of science.

At the end of it all, Safety Sergt. Arthur Roth announced that the first official test of his new "drunk detector" was a big success.

That opinion was not shared by all of the eminent psychiatrists, physicians, surgeons, judges and eye, ear, nose and throat specialists who assembled in Mount Sinai Hospital.

Of the four men who took the test—which involved drinking a total of 46 ounces of whisky and chasing it with about 64 ounces of beer at police expense—two, both newspapermen, remained standing. The other two, both cab drivers, were put to bed in a quiet room and later taken to their homes in taxis.

While cameraman fought for positions, the four volunteers lined up alongside an emergency operating table and watched Sergt. Roth pour their drinks.

Response Is Ready.

"C'mon, you fellows, let's get started," said the good-natured sergeant as he carefully poured one ounce of whisky in each of four glasses. "Now, I'm the bartender and you boys are drinking. Let's go!"

The "boys" responded.

Two hours later, one of the quartet, Eddie Dork, newspaper photographer, left the hospital to "go downtown and pay some bills."

Gordon Davis, reporter, began to walk unsteadily after 10 ounces and reported to Sergt. Roth that he was "getting a little dizzy."

"Anyway, Sarge," he said, "I've had as much as I ever drink at one time and guess I'd better stop."

The sergeant then turned his undivided attention to Frank Svec, 30, and David E. Offutt, 26, the cab drivers. Offutt had been giggling since the eighth ounce and Svec had been slowly becoming sad.

Both decided they were good for "a couple of more shots."

Gulps and Giggles.

Sergt. Roth, closely watched by the doctors, nurses, city officials and newspapermen, poured two 2-ounce drinks. Offutt gulped his quickly and giggled again. Svec made a turn as if going around a corner and looked serious.

Then the two survivors were led to another room across the hall for a blood test, given by Dr. Reuben Strauss.

Roth and his assistants prepared for a final test on the "drunk detector," which is a stereoscope with an adjustable plate. It has big lenses, through which the suspected drunk is supposed to identify pictures or colors, or read numbers and letters that gradually are decreased in size.

Offutt, laughing loudly, staggered back into the emergency room. He reached for a glass offered by the sergeant and drank hurriedly.

"Now, Dave," the sergeant asked, "will you sit in this chair and identify the pictures I put in the plate?"

"Bunch of Graveyard."

"A bunch of graveyard," Offutt yelled. He started laughing.

"Now, what?"

The sergeant inserted a card of white diamonds, stars and circles on a black background.

"I see," shouted Offutt, "five diamonds, five diamonds, five diamonds, five diamonds six, five diamonds seven, five diamonds eight—ha, ha, ho!"

"This man seems to be drunk."

"Oh, yeah! 'At's what you say. I'm one up on yuh!"

So they led Offutt to the lobby and looked around for Svec.

Svec was sprawled on a chair—sound asleep.

"Well," Sergt. Roth announced, "I guess the test is over and from what we know it looks like a big success."

Offutt and Svec were helped to a private room with a big bed. Later, on the way to recovery, they went home in a taxi.

The same four men will be given another test on the detector tomorrow, so that their normal reactions may be obtained and compared with the reactions registered today. Not until then will the actual scientific results of the experiment be known.

Killer Granted Stay.

Oklahoma City, April 9 (AP).—Seven hours before he was to have walked to the electric chair, James Hargus, convicted slayer of a Tulsa policeman, was granted a stay of execution late today by Gov. E. W. Marland until April 24. Hargus, who had abandoned all hope, was granted the delay to permit attorneys to apply for a rehearing in the case.

and arranged for beds for from 50 to 100 of the delegates. With the help of Boileau and Marcantonio, some cash was raised which added to the funds collected by the "hunger marchers" from members of Congress at the Capitol, Lasser said would be sufficient to provide all the needy delegates with food and shelter for the night.

Boileau's move for the emergency appropriation in the House was to have coincided with the introduction in the Senate of a similar bill by Senator Frazier, Republican, of North Dakota. With the Senate sitting as a court in the impeachment trial of Judge Ritter, Frazier never obtained the opportunity to introduce the bill, although a petition of the "hunger marchers" to Vice President Garner was read into the Senate record.

Moves for Adjournment.

In the House, Boileau had no sooner risen to ask for unanimous consent for the introduction of his bill than Representative Taber, of New York, raised a point of "no quorum" and Representative Bankhead, of Alabama, moved for adjournment, which was granted automatically under the House rules.

The corridors of the House by this time had been cleared of all but a handful of the 400 demonstrators who at one time paraded in ellipse formation before the House restaurant, rubbing their stomachs, and shouting, "We are hungry."

A minor tussle between a Capitol policeman and Louis Dugan, a fur-capped, fur-coated delegate from Wisconsin, was precipitated when the policeman grabbed Dugan and started marching him to the door. Dugan protested but was quieted by Lasser, and left a few minutes later with other members of the delegation. Aside from this incident, police had no trouble with the marchers.

Civic Leaders Address 500 Fathers and Sons

Five hundred boys and parents celebrated "Father-Son Night" last night at Shaw Junior High School, where addresses were made on behalf of the church by the Rev. Walter H. Brooks, and on behalf of the Police Department by Daniel Pittman, detective sergeant, who advocated formation of a school club under police auspices.

George W. Beasley, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, spoke in the interest of civic developments in which boys might participate. The relationship of home and school was discussed by Charles M. Thomas, of Armstrong High School. Dr. Stephen J. Lewis read two original poems on boy life. A ping-pong match between C. L. Baltimore and C. L. Jackson was won by the latter.

Arrest Awaited In Wendel Case Kidnaper Hunt

Man Whose Seizure Held Up Hauptmann's Execution Identifies Picture.

By the United Press.

New York, April 9.—Orders went out tonight from the office of District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan to arrest a man identified as one of the "kidnapers" of Paul H. Wendel—the disbarred lawyer who remains in a Trenton jail charged with the crime for which Bruno Richard Hauptmann was executed.

Police seemed confident that in another 24 hours they would be able to tie up all the loose ends of the Wendel case. They refused to reveal the name of the man for whom they were looking, but said he had a police record and spent some time in prison in another State.

Wendel himself put them on the trail. Geoghan sent photographs to Trenton, and they were carried into the Mercer County Jail. There the gray-haired prisoner—once a brilliant lawyer—studied them. Finally he pounced on one photograph.

He said he recognized the face as that of one of the four men who forced him into an automobile on February 14 and took him to a house near Floyd Bennett Airport. There, according to Wendel, he was forced at the point of a pistol to confess that he murdered Charles A. Lindbergh, jr.

Ten days later, he said, he was taken to New Jersey and turned over to Ellis Parker, Burlington County detective, who placed him in the New Lisbon Colony for the feeble-minded. Wendel said he underwent a "third degree" there and once more confessed to the Lindbergh crime.

The result was that he was taken to Mercer County jail and arraigned on a charge of murder. His appearance delayed Hauptmann's execution 72 hours, even though Wendel repudiated both confessions.

Wendel has been under observation for mental ailments several times and in addition to the murder charge, he is accused of embezzlements stretching back to 1931.

Geoghan said today's identification was made in the presence of Erwin Marshall, Mercer County prosecutor, and that Wendel seemed positive he had picked the right man.

Sisters, 13 and 14, Seized in Thefts

New York, April 9 (AP).—Two sisters in their early 'teens were arrested by police today for apartment house thefts that totaled about $2,500, and said their father directed their operations.

The girls, one 14 and the other 13, said their father provided them with raffle tickets with which they invaded East Side apartments. Gaining entry with the subterfuge, the girls told police they learned where pocketbooks were laid, then attempt to slip back in and take them.

Their father collected the proceeds from them each night, they said.

Mayor Favors Proposal to Aid Large Families

Official of Massena, N. Y., Joins Move Seeking Federal Subsidies.

By the Associated Press.

Massena, N. Y., April 9.—Sponsors of a movement to gain Federal aid for large families won the support of Mayor Rollin A. Newton tonight.

The mayor agreed to serve on an advisory committee of business and professional men that will draw up a program of action.

Fifteen fathers, each with five to eight children, launched the movement last week, contending an annual Federal subsidy of from $50 to $100 a child would enable parents of large families such as theirs to raise better citizens. They estimated the subsidy would cost the Government $2,000,000,000 a year, but declared it would be an "invaluable investment" resulting in future generations of citizens stronger "physically and mentally."

Formosa Degree, leader of the movement, said that under present conditions children of large families were handicapped by lack of funds for proper education and physical care.

At a meeting Tuesday night the fathers invited a group of business and professional men to serve as an advisory committe and agreed to await their report before proceeding further.

The Rev. Barber L. Waters, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, said the "principle of the plan already exists in the school system, but this is a step further into the realm of health."

Retail Federation To Be Reorganized

By the Associated Press.

A reorganization under which majority control of the American Retail Federation will be in the hands of trustees representing State and national associations which have joined it in recent months was promised yesterday by C. O. Sherrill, president.

He said it would be effected at an annual membership meeting in New York next Tuesday.

Sherrill's statement followed a report yesterday by the majority of a House committee which investigated the federation. It termed the organization a "Super-lobby formed by department and chain stores to pretend to speak for small merchants. A committee minority disputed this. Sherrill said today that the federation's membership includes approximately 63,000 stores.

Gainesville Mayor Praises Red Cross

In a telegram to The Washington Post yesterday, Dr. W. A. Palmour, Mayor of Gainesville, Ga., which suffered greatly from loss of life and property from the recent tornado, praised the work of the Red Cross. He said:

"The citizens of Gainesville owe more than we can ever pay to the American Red Cross. Without their assistance, I don't know what we would have done during the past few days. The efficiency with which they are doing their work toward relieving suffering thousands in this town and surrounding communities is amazing.

"It is impossible to estimate the great loss we have sustained in this indescribable calamity. Workers from the national staff of the Red Cross as well as members of the Gainesville chapter are doing all that is humanly possible to assist those who need such help so urgently. The Red Cross is in dire need of an enormous amount of money to carry out the rehabilitation for the 5,000 of our homeless citizens. Any assistance that our friends can give us from the outside through contributions of money to the Red Cross will mean much to us.

"The need is great and I send this appeal to generous people everywhere."

Army 'Knew' Of Supply Plot, Inquiry Is Told

Col. Gruber Testifies He Informed Superiors of Resale Scheme.

By the Associated Press.

Testimony that War Department officials had intimations in 1931 of a conspiracy to obtain Army surplus goods ostensibly for charitable purposes and divert them to the private market was given yesterday to the House Military Committee by an Army officer.

Lieut. Col. William R. Gruber told the committee reports of the conspiracy had come to his attention and that he had reported the affair to his superiors. Gruber said he was on duty in the office of the then Assistant Secretary of War, Frederick Payne, under Secretary Patrick J. Hurley.

At that time the committee had under consideration and later approved a plan submitted by the American Legion to obtain War Department surplus goods for distribution through the legion to the destitute.

Robert J. Byers, then adjutant for the Michigan department of the legion, originally proposed the plan to the legion's national rehabilitation committee, meeting in Washington, Gruber testified. It was approved and passed on to the Military Committee for submission to the War Department.

Byers, Another Convicted.

Byers and a George Kreiger later were indicted in the southern district of New York for conspiracy to defraud the Govenment, tried and convicted and the conviction later was reversed on a technicality. The case is still pending.

Gruber told the committee that Joe Silverman, a dealer in War Department surplus goods, came to him before the military committee approved the legion's plan as submitted by Byers.

Gruber said Silverman informed him Byers and Kreiger were considering obtaining surpluses below cost and diverting them to private business channels.

This information, Gruber said, was passed on to then Assistant Secretary Payne and other War Department officials. Gruber said he did not advise the committee of the situation when he appeared before it in connection with the American Legion's plan.

Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, insisted it was Gruber's duty to have advised the committee of his knowledge of the reported conspiracy. Gruber answered he believed he had performed his duty as an officer "100 per cent."

McSwain Grills Witness.

"Why didn't you tell this committee you feared Byers was trying to put over a fraudulent scheme, warn us of this sinister plan and not let him impose upon this committee?" asked McSwain.

"I passed the information in my possession up to my superiors," answered Gruber. "I am an officer in a military organization. I reported to my chief and did not consider it my duty to report to this committee."

Gruber said he believed the then quartermaster general and the Assistant Secretary of War were present when he testified before the committee in 1932. He added he did not think it was possible such a scheme as had been reported could be worked.

The committee plans to recall Payne today. He testified Monday the department had no fear the Army surpluses would be diverted from charitable uses for which they were intended.

Senate Passes Flood, Storm Loan Measure

$50,000,000 Voted After RFC Head Is Scored on Regulations.

In a 30-minute legislative session yesterday the Senate quickly adopted the $50,000,000 Walsh-Koppleman bill extending liberalized RFC and Federal Housing Administration loans to businesses and homeowners in flood and tornado stricken areas.

Meanwhile, sponsors of the original legislation in the House, together with Democratic members of the New England Congressional delegation, met and voiced the fear that Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC would demand such stringent collateral for relief loans as to make the bill inoperative.

Representative Herman P. Koppleman (Democrat), Connecticut, author of the bill, was incensed at a statement made by Jones at a press conference, when Jones is reported to have said he would "demand both the left and the right eye as collateral, and maybe that will not be enough."

Koppleman said he would state upon the floor of the House "that the sense of Congress demands this bill be interpreted liberally," and he declared he would take his case to President Roosevelt if it became plain that Jones intended to ask full collateral before making relief loans. The delegation unanimously adopted a resolution approving Koppleman's position.

Senator Duncan U. Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, called the bill up for action in the Senate. The Senate amended the measure by increasing the loan authority from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000, and added authorization for more liberal loan insurance under the National Housing Act.

An amendment from the floor by Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, will permit loans for highways and bridges in addition to financing, repair, or reconstruction of water, irrigation, gas, electric, sewer, drainage, flood control, communication or transportation systems.

Another amendment by Senator Russell (Democrat), Georgia, would authorize the liberal term loans to municipal or political subdivisions, including school districts, water sewage, irrigation and flood control districts.

RFC disbursements can be made up to January 23, 1939, under the terms of the bill.

The housing provisions of the bill are intended to help the storm or tornado afflicted homeowner, whereas the RFC sections give aid to business and manufacturers. Under the housing act amendment, the restrictive measures put into effect April 1 by Congress will be waived in flood and storm areas. Where loan insurance was cut to 10 per cent under the amended act, the bill approved yesterday will return it to 20 per cent. In addition, accumulated insurance credit, held by private lending institutions, will continue in the stricken areas, although suspended otherwise by the recent act.

The bill is expected to be called up in the House today for concurrence in Senate amendments.

Roosevelt Views Storm Damage En Route Home

Inspects Gainesville Area; Holds Parley on Train; Due Here Today.

By the Associated Press.

En Route with President Roosevelt to Washington, April 9.—Stopping at the tornado-devasted city of Gainesville, Ga., President Roosevelt late tonight told the silent, saddened folks thronging the station he was "proud of the spirit you have shown" and assured full Government co-operation in the tragedy.

At Gainesville, within sight of the debris of the tornado which lashed the city Monday, Mr. Roosevelt conversed for almost half an hour with representatives of the Red Cross, the Works Progress Administration, the Civilian Conservation Corps and local authorities.

A hushed throng stood behind ropes guarded by militia as the Presidential train rolled into the station and a committee of tired-faced citizens was immediately escorted aboard to talk with the President.

Tell of Rehabilitation.

Citizens of the town, where civic leaders already are pushing plans to rebuild from the $10,000,000 wreckage here, told of rehabilitation plans. A similar reconstruction program is being pused at Tupelo, Miss., which shared with Gainesville the brunt of the storm winds which killed more than 400 persons.

"All of the Government agencies of all kinds are co-operating with very practical results," Mr. Roosevelt said.

"I am happy to see that you are determined to rebuild this city on bigger and better lines than ever before."

Mr. Roosevelt said he hoped to return to Gainesville later and "meet you under happier circumstances."

Views Storm Damage.

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt, riding a special train over rails a foot under water in some areas, last night pentrated into the heart of the section where tornadoes and floods have taken nearly 500 lives.

En route to Washington, Mr. Roosevelt halted at Gainesville, Ga., where 187 were killed and more than 700 injured when a tornado smashed the town early this week.

Henry M. Baker, assistant disaster director of the American Red Cross, and William Carl Hunt, Red Cross regional director, boarded the Presidential special at Gainesville to give the President a factual picture of rehabilitation work in the stricken areas. Baker is in charge of relief both at Gainesville and Tupelo, Miss., hardest hit cities of the South.

Maj. Gen. Van Horn Moseley, commander of the Fourth Corps Area, who has made a survey of the tornado area, was aboard the President's train reporting on the situation.

The President is due in Washington this afternoon.

Rains Swell Rivers.

Last night the menace of floods had replaced the tornado terror in the deep South. Tornado-shattered cities were rebuilding, the fear of pestilence had passed, the dead were buried.

But across the South, from the Carolina seaboard to Arkansas, torrential rains which followed in the wake of the tornadoes were sending rivers roaring out of their banks. The streams in some sections were receding, but in other sections they still were rising. Four persons had lost their lives and hundreds of families had fled their homes.

The menace of a disastrous flood was believed passed on the Tennessee River at Chattanooga. The stream crested at 35.4 feet yesterday afternoon and unless the continued rainfall causes a new crest, the acute danger of loss of life and property damage was believed over.

In Georgia, however, three rivers converging on Rome drove 500 families from their homes. Water stood in low-lying streets of West Point, Ga., where the Chattahoochee River reached a crest of 22.5 feet. WPA workers at Savannah were strengthening a new $4,000,000 levee as the Savannah River roared at a 41-foot crest. At Milledgeville, Ga., the Oconee River was at flood stage and at Macon the Ocmulgee was rising at .2 of a foot an hour, although levees were holding back the flood from the city.

Lives Threatened.

Steadily rising waters of the Alabama, Coosa and Tallapoosa threatened lives and property in central Alabama. Hamp Draper, head of the State convict department, expected to remove 650 convicts from a camp at Wetumpka. Homes already were inundated in the State capital, Montgomery, where the Alabama was out of its banks, and had reached 46.1 feet, a foot over "danger stage."

Thousands of acres of Arkansas land were under water as slowly rising waters of the L'Anguille Creek backed up from the swollen Mississippi. Seventy-nine families were living in National Guard tents after fleeing their homes.

In eastern North Carolina, many families had fled as the Cape Fear, Neuse, Tar and Roanoke were swollen to raging torrents by heavy rains.

Ignoring the heavy rains, rehabilitation crews plunged forward in work of rebuilding greater cities on wreckage of Tupelo and Gainesville.

Discovery of charred bodies of two children, bringing the death toll to 187, was insufficient to stop the ring of hammers in Gainesville yesterday. The bodies were found in the smoke-blackened ruins of a grocery store.

Earlier, the death toll had been increased by the death of Mrs. Jesse Dunagan in an Atlanta hospital, where she was rushed from Gainesville.

Mississippi's death toll rose to 221 with the deaths of three persons injured in Sunday night's tornado at Tupelo. At least a score of the injured still were in a critical condition.

Fear still was felt that the city reservoir at Tupelo would yield additional bodies when it is drained. Rains Wednesday night impeded drainage and it was expected to be several days before it definitely is known whether additional bodies are in the reservoir.

Relief agencies consolidated their rehabilitation efforts. John C. Wilson, Red Cross disaster worker, assured his organization would assist the needy to rebuild and refurnish their homes. The aid was to be confined to those without funds or insurance.

Mayor J. P. Nanney announced Tupelo would build a $300,000 hospital. Officials of the Commonwealth Fund of New York have pledged $260,000.

Report Shows NRA Conflicts With Trust Act

By the Associated Press.

An NRA-Commerce Department report said yesterday that seven industries ran into conflict with anti-trust laws in price-fixing efforts under the Blue Eagle.

In a 230-page survey on minimum price regulation, one of a number of reports on the results of NRA, a general conclusion was reached also that price-regulation under NRA was a failure.

"Efforts by industry members to exercise a greater degree of control over their price structure are, of course, extremely common," the report said.

Racketeering Resulted.

"In seven of the industries studied, such efforts brought them into conflict with the anti-trust laws. In one of these seven, and in three additional cases, racketeering was resorted to in a desperate effort to remedy conditions."

The specific instances were not listed in the report.

"Direct minimum price fixing," the report continued, "appears to have been the most unsatisfactory from an administrative point of view. The grant of power to the code authorities was in most cases too broad to permit NRA to exercise an adequate degree of supervision.

"Cost protection, although in most cases theoretically based on individual cost, in actual practice established price floors no less surely than direct or emergency price fixing.

"The administration of these provisions resulted in constant conflict between NRA and the code authorities. On the whole, this device had little to recommend it as an administrative instrument.

Failure Complete.

"The most satisfactory in actual operation was the declaration of emergency (where prices were fixed for a specified time and purpose).

"One important advantage was that it enabled NRA to exercise a maximum degree of control over both the establishment of prices and their administration. The time limitation with requirements of automatic review prior to extension was a safeguard against abuse.

"In some cases these efforts to ameliorate conditions by limiting price competition resulted in complete failure.

"In some a greater or lesser degree of success was attained; success, that is, from the standpoint of the problem attacked. * * *

"In many cases price control was sought by one group in an industry primarily in an attempt to circumscribe the activities of the competing group.

"These efforts failed almost uniformly, either because the faction at which they were directed refused to co-operate or because NRA refused its backing."

Union Pacific Seeks Bond Issue Approval

Moving to cut interest charges, the Union Pacific Railroad yesterday asked Interstate Commerce Commission approval of $26,835,000 refinancing operations.

The road proposed to issue this sum of 3½ per cent, 35-year debenture bonds to replace a like amount of outstanding 4½ per cent gold bonds. The outstanding obligations would be called for redemption July 1 at 102½. The new bonds would be sold to Kuhn, Loeb & Co., New York finance house, at 97.

2 Robins

Fate Is Kind to One, Abandons Other.

One robin rescued, another "missing."

That was the score yesterday as a civil service commissioner and a former Zoo employe recovered from their respective experiences with two different robins.

John C. Dellinger, 4007 Fourth street northwest, got out of a sickbed to save a redbreast that was slowly strangling in a tree 25 feet above the sidewalk. Ill in bed since last fall, the 73-year-old retired Zoo employe placed a ladder against the tree and climbed up to rescue the fluttering bird, its neck caught in a string noose.

The "missing" bird is the one that has been intruding upon the early morning sleep of Harry B. Mitchell, civil service commissioner, by alighting on a window sill of the commissioner's bedroom and fighting its reflection in the window pane. The Mitchell home is at 117 Oxford street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Mitchell said yesterday he won't be bothered by the robin again. Asked to amplify on the remark, he replied cryptically:

"The one thing I'm reasonably sure of is, that robin is never coming back."

New Soviet Aid Defends Curb On Press Wires

Soviet censorship was defended yesterday by Constantine Umansky, who arrived here with his wife and daughter, Nina, to become counsellor to the Russian Embassy.

The former chief of the Moscow foreign office press section emphasized that the examination of news dispatches at least was not secret and did not extend to the mails and the telephone.

"I was not a censor at all in the real sense of the word," he said. "We didn't delete any portion of a wire dispatch when it came to a question of fact. In some cases we summoned the correspondent and compromised on the point at issue."

Newspaper copy was passed, he added, when the writer disclosed his source of information or showed he found his material in a Soviet newspaper.

"What we wanted to do," he explained, "was to prevent misstatements and misrepresentations."

Black Billy Sunday Dead in Louisiana

New Orleans, April 9 (AP).—The Rev. James Gordon McPherson, known to millions of Negroes as the "Black Billy Sunday" died tonight.

The 67-year-old evangelist, who Roark Bradford said inspired the creation of the character "De Lawd" in Mark Connolly's play, "The Green Pastures," lapsed into coma last night after being ill for 18 months. (The play was based on a book by Bradford.)

Surrounded by friends and his immediate family, he said his last request was that he be buried with a Bible on his chest.

McPherson has devoted the past 50 years to "fighting sin and the devil," as he expressed it.

"I always tried to preach simple faith and goodness to my people," he said. "I fought sin hard. I knew they slipped, for I slipped myself. But that's where the mercy and the forgiveness of the Lord comes in."

Among his most valued possessions was his warrant as a corporal of Company E, Twenty-fourth Infantry Volunteers, United States Army, with which he charged up San Juan Hill, Cuba, in the Spanish-American War.

Church Plans Antique Show April 15 to 17

Nearly 400 Items in Wide Variety to Be Displayed at Georgetown.

Chairs in which historic figures sat, glasses from which they drank champagne, and gowns and shoe buckles worn by the ladies with whom they danced, will be part of the benefit "antique" display of the Christ Church in Georgetown on April 15-17.

Almost 400 items ranging in variety from a lace cuff worn by the celebrated Laura Keene while playing at Ford's Theater the night that President Lincoln was assassinated, to a silver soup tureen given by Napoleon to one of his marshals, will be on exhibit.

Included among the pieces of furniture made historic by having served distinguished persons will be a chair used by Martha Washington, the legs of which were sawed off to permit Mrs. Washington's feet to touch the floor; another chair in which Henry Clay sat for his portrait hanging in the Senate gallery; a sedan chair owned by Abrahama Lincoln, a whist table at which Gen. Washington played, and a doll crib made of cherry wood for Nellie Grant, daughter of the President.

There will be a gown worn by one of the Revolutionary dames who danced with Gen. Lafayette; seventeenth century shoe buckles, a number of shawls and a champagne glass used by Admiral David Farragut.

A variety of silverware and antique jewelry will be shown, including many examples of the work of C. A. Burnett, one of the earliest of Georgetown's silversmiths, a seventeenth century Spanish flagon, eighteenth century mourning rings and a malachite necklace.

Letters from Lee and Washington will be displayed alongside miniatures and silhouettes of their contemporaries, the ribbons that adorned the ill-fated French Emperor Maximilian, of Mexico; an oriental opium pipe, a clock of Lafayette's time and another clock brought into Japan by the Dutch in 1600, and a marble window-sill from the home of Francis Scott Key.

The committee in charge of the exhibit includes Henry S. Matthews, jr., N.W. Dorsey, Mrs. Louise Mackall, Emily C. Matthews, Mrs. H. Hollerith, Leila Mechlin, Ernest Mechlin and Mrs. Spencer S. Wood.

Funded in 1817, Christ Church has been enlarged twice, once in 1868 and a second time in 1885.

Bread Salesmen Bonded On Charge of Peddling

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 9.—Accused of peddling without licenses, ten bread truck salesmen for out-of-town bakeries were given a hearing yesterday afternoon in Peoples Court and released under $500 bond each for the action of the April grand jury.

The men, as agents for Philadelphia, Altoona and Johnstown baking companies, have been selling in the city for more than a year. The drivers are accused of selling bread from trucks on the streets without making previous arrangements for delivery on order.

L. Q. C. Lamar, Indian Fighter, Public Official, Is Dead at 82

Funeral to Be Tomorrow for Scout in Campaigns of 1876-77, Land Office Recorder Under Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson.

An old Indian fighter and public official, Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus Lamar, 82, died yesterday at his home, 1523 Twenty-second street northwest.

He was recorder of the Federal Land Office under Presidents Grover Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson.

As a young man he was a scout with Gen. Nelson A. Miles in the Indian campaigns of 1876 and 1877, marked by the retreat into Canada of the renowned chieftain, Sitting Bull.

Until recent months he was a familiar sight on Washington streets, walking along swinging the gold-headed cane presented to his father by President Cleveland when the elder Lamar, also named Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus, was Secretary of the Interior.

His rare gift for making friends and telling anecdotes about the old South and the Western plains in the days of the redskins, enabled him to win the assistance of many strangers in crossing streets when his eyesight failed him in his declining years.

"A new-found friend was always bringing him home," a member of his family recalled.

Born January 25, 1854, near Oxford, Miss., he came to Washington more than a half century ago. He was secretary to his father, a former Confederate Army colonel, while the elder Lamar was in the Cabinet, the Senate and on the Supreme Court bench.

He was active in the Sons of Confederate Veterans.

Survivors are his widow, Mrs. Atala Nicholson Lamar; a daughter, Mrs. Alton A. Lessard, Lewiston, Me., and three sons, Mirabeau B., and Janvier L., both of Washington, and Henry N., of the Harvard University football coaching staff.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the W. R. Speare Co. parlors, 1623 Connecticut avenue northwest. Temporary burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery. Later his body will be placed in the family plot at Oxford.

Walter Whittlesey, Librarian, Dead

He was assistant chief of the music division when retired in 1932. An authority on early American music, he compiled a catalogue of the first editions of Stephen C. Foster.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Florence Gertrude Shuman Whittlesey; three daughters, Mrs. Harry W. Finney and Mrs. L. Cecil Copley, both of Washington, and Mrs. Frank Shepherd, San Gabriel, Calif., and a son, Charles J., of Washington. His funeral will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at the V. L. Speare Co., 1009 H street northwest. Burial will be private.

8 in Refuse Service Rewarded for Efforts

Eight employes in the District street cleaning and refuse services were rewarded for doing the best jobs in their respective fields during the last year. The rewards, consisting of $5 and $2 cash given to first and second place man of each of four divisions, were presented in the District Building by Mrs. W. W. Husband, chairman of the civic section of the Twentieth Century Club.

Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, and J. B. Gordon, sanitary engineer, and other officials were present. Those to whom prizes were given were: Garbage collection service—James Wells, first, and Murray Tobias, second; ashes—George Brooks and Clayton Wanger; trash—George Moore and Elkins Clements; street cleaning—John Bell and Alonzo Coles.

Funeral Tomorrow For Walter O. Davis

Funeral services for Walter O. Davis, 66, will be held at Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest, at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Mr. Davis died Wednesday at his home, 1020 Monroe street northwest. Burial is to be in Glenwood Cemetery.

A native Washingtonian, Mr. Davis had been a drug salesman for many years. He was at one time proprietor of a drug store on G street near Eleventh street northwest. He is survived by his wife, Suretta Davis; a son, Walter Davis, and a daughter, Mrs. Lucille Dontigney.

Gallows Romance Recalled by Death

Chicago, April 9 (AP).—The romance of a young social worker who fell in love with one of the condemned Haymarket rioters and was married to him a few days before he was led to the gallows was recalled with the death today of the jail bride, Mrs. Mina Van Zant Spies.

Mrs. Spies died in a rooming house she owned. She was 74.

In 1887 August Spies was a county jail prisoner, accused of participation in the bloody Haymarket Square riot of May 4, 1886. Visiting the prisoners was a young social worker, the daughter of a prominent Chicago chemist, Miss Van Zant. They met and fell in love.

During the long trial she stood by him. When it appeared certain that Spies was to die, she brought a minister to the jail and the marriage was performed.

After her husband's execution, Mrs. Spies espoused the cause of radicalism, and for years campaigned for the I. W. W. and similar organizations.

3 Grade Pupils Hurt In High School Strike

Holdenville, Okla., April 9 (AP).—Three grade school pupils were injured, one severely, as 600 striking Holdenville High School students invaded ward schools here today seeking support. Dorothy Dinnis, 10, was jammed against the side of a brick building by the surging students and suffered a head wound.

The strikers demanded that the school board re-employ Ben J. Foster as superintendent. The board elected Jim Ragland, county superintendent, for the place next year. Ragland has not accepted.

Laundry Chutes Have Opening at Each Floor

The problem of collecting soiled linen and clothes and storing it until wash day is an annoying one in many homes. Hampers and bags get unpleasantly full and take up valuable bathroom or hall space.

A laundry chute may be built with openings on all floors, and the linen may be dropped in it, to be whisked away to a bin in the basement where, at the proper time, it will be handy to the laundry room.

This type of improvement may be financed under the terms of the modernization credit plan of the Federal Housing Administration.

Drill Postponed.

For the second week in succession the regimental competitive drill for high school cadets was postponed yesterday because of rain. The drill, with the award of prizes for the battalion and regimental band competitions two weeks ago, will be held on April 23.

Dirigible Hindenburg, on Maiden Voyage, Reported in Distress

Britain's Needy Receive Money At King's Hand

By the Associated Press.

London, April 9.—Westminster Abbey was thronged today when King Edward participated in the age-old ceremony of distributing coins on Maundy Thursday.

It was the first time His Majesty had participated in a formal public ceremony since the funeral of King George, his father. The King wore morning clothes.

Edward gave coins to 142 persons—71 old men and 71 old women, specially chosen. Customarily there would have been 42 recipients of the Maundy money—the number corresponding to the King's age on his next birthday. But by his command 71 men and women received the gifts, the same number that would have been present had King George been alive.

Reminder of Last Supper.

Recipients of the Maundy money, who are drawn from all over the country, must be 60 years of age, have paid taxes and have employed labor. The fortunate ones placed on the list compiled by the royal almoner remain upon it for the rest of their lives.

The purses and bags containing the specially-minted silver pennies, two-penny pieces and groats were borne into the choir of the abbey by a yeoman of the King's bodyguard, resplendent in Tudor uniform of scarlet and white.

King Walks Next.

Behind him walked the King, attended by his lord high almoner, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and other dignitaries.

All carried nosegays of sweet herbs, a relic of the days when plague had to be guarded against. In addition, the officials wore "towels" across their chests, a symbol of that part of the ceremony in which the king used to wash the feet of the pensioners.

The last sovereign actually to perform this act was King James II.

Edward was the second ruler in 200 years to take part personally in the ceremony. The late King George went wih Queen Mary to the abbey in 1934 to hand out the Maundy pennies. The Archbishop of Canterbury otherwise does it.

Spain Sets Date to Elect Successor to Zamora

Madrid, April 9 (AP).—Spain will elect a President on May 17 to succeed Niceto Alcala Zamora, ousted by Parliament on charges of malfeasance 20 months before the expiration of his six-year term.

The government tonight announced May 10 as the date for selection of 473 presidential electors, who, with 473 deputies in the Cortes, will elect a new chief executive seven days later.

Treasury Bare, Pershing Hall In Paris to Close on April 30

Congress' Appropriation of $482,032 Falls Short of Paying All Debts and Satisfying American Legion's Demand for $250,000 Endowment.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 9.—Pershing Hall, landmark of the American Legion in Europe, will close its doors April 30, its treasury empty, the board of directors announced tonight.

The $500,000 building, headquarters of Paris Post, No. 1, and other organizations, may go to creditors unless three-cornered differences among the United States Treasury, the American Legion and Pershing Hall stockholders can be adjusted.

Congress appropriated $482,032.92, funds left by the war-time soldiers' newspaper, the Stars and Stripes, to pay all debts on Pershing Hall and give it an endowment fund.

Debts are about $350,000. The Government agreed to pay all proper claims, but exacted clear title to the building. When this was arranged there arose an objection by the American Legion in the United States, which refused to approve the transaction unless the endowment were $250,000. Pershing Hall officials said they saw no way of reducing the debt further.

None of the creditors took legal steps to protect their claims. Officials of the building corporation said the French government "passed the word" that none should start foreclosure proceedings.

Pershing Hall officials said there was division in the directorate. One group approved the American Legion's demand that $250,000 should be retained as an endowment fund, necessitating the cancellation of large loans by two officials and possibly further reduction of other claims.

Another group contended that Congress appropriated the money without strings and that the law provided for payment of all just debts without fixing the size of the endowment fund.

The heavy debt, officials explained, was increased materially by the fall of the dollar. When the building was erected the French indebtedness was in francs at 25 to the dollar. That indebtedness is calculated now at only 15 to the dollar, an increase of two-thirds.

Hazen to Abandon Gas Tax Proposal

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said yesterday he will not press his proposal for a 1-cent gasoline tax increase or a larger appropriation for unemployment relief than carried in the Budget Bureau figures in view of the attitude of Chairman Thomas, of the Senate Committee on District Appropriations.

Senator Thomas said he saw no need for additional tax revenue and that he favors waiting until the next session of Congress before appropriating more money for unemployment relief than recommended by the Budget Bureau.

The Senate sub-committee today will hold an executive hearing on the traffic problems of the District and will seek to devise a rider granting the District Commissioners any additional authority they deem necessary.

Officer Saves $3,000 As Bandits Get $4,500

Fall River, Mass., April 9 (AP).—Two masked holdup men robbed a paymaster of a $4,500 pay roll today in the yard of the Parker mill. A disarmed policeman saved $3,000 by fleeing from the robbers who shot at him several times.

Paymaster Henry Sherman, of Westport, and Patrolman Thomas H. Ryan were ordered to put up their hands as they entered the mill yard. The robbers took Ryan's pistol and ordered the pair to turn over two money boxes.

Ryan grabbed one of the boxes containing $3,000, and ran for the mill vestibule. Both robbers fired several shots but missed him. Taking the second box, they sped away in an automobile.

Orphan Girl Saves Inmates in Blaze

Cincinnati, April 9 (AP).—An orphan girl's quick action in sounding a fire alarm averted a possible catastrophe today at St. Aloysius Orphanage, the home of 185 parentless boys and girls.

The young heroine, 15-year-old Rose Mary Wurzelbacher, awakened by the sound of falling plaster and crackling timber, shouted a warning to sisters in a dormitory, speedily sounded the fire gong, and then aided in carrying to safety eight or ten boys and girls of kindergarten age.

Fire Chief Barney J. Houston heaped words of praise on Rose Mary.

"She was a very brave girl," said Huston. "Her thought for the welfare of the others and quick action probably prevented a panic."

20-Ton 'Eye' Nears California Home

Pasadena, Calif., April 9 (AP).—Scientists who study the stars will receive a 20-ton glass eye tomorrow to help them peer into distant universes.

The world's largest piece of glass, wrapped in a 15-ton steel packing case, will become the eye-mirror for a 200-inch telescope on Palomar Mountain for the California Institute of Technology and the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

The glass made its last overnight stop tonight at San Bernardino on the 3,300-mile railroad trip westward from Corning, N. Y. The railroads insured it for $100,000, its present replacement value, and the freight charges were $2,400.

A 46-mile run will bring it to Lamanda Park Station tomorrow, where it will be unloaded and sent 8 miles to the California Institute of Technology.

'Passover' Cantata.

"The Passover," a cantata by Anton Rubenstein, will be presented at 8 o'clock tonight in Eighth Street Temple. Lewis Atwater, organist and director, will be assisted by Miss Ann Sorber, soprano soloist, and a quartet composed of Florence Sindell, soprano; Flora Brylawski, contralto; George Myers, tenor, and John H. Marville, basso.

Inquiry Hears 2 Hill Farmers On Plane Crash

Tell of Seeing Ship in Fog; Copeland Cites Radio Beam Criticism.

By the Associated Press.

Uniontown, Pa., April 9.—Two residents of the mountains told today of seeing a plane through rifts in fog banks near the spot on Chestnut Ridge where the TWA's Sun Racer crashed, killing 11 persons.

Albert J. Sharp, a farmer, added, before a Department of Commerce inquiry, that the plane's motor was humming smoothly as it passed his farm home at 10 a. m. Tuesday morning.

The investigators have tentatively fixed the time of the fatal crash at 10:20 a. m.

They heard residents of the district in an attempt to determine the exact time, and will move to Pittsburgh to conduct the inquiry into technical phases tomorrow, after wreckage of the plane is burned.

Tells of Plane Dipping.

Sharp's neighbor, Isaac M. Patterson, told of a plane dipping for a moment out of fog 150 feet above his house, then roaring on south toward the high Chestnut Ridge. A few moments later, Patterson continued, he heard a sound like a small explosion, but didn't connect the noise with the ship.

A story of hearing the big ship and later a roaring crash also was given by Ray Addis, WPA foreman and forest ranger, who aided in rescuing the three survivors. Hostess Nellie Granger, Mrs. Meyer Elenstein, wife of the Mayor of Newark, N. J., and C. C. Challinor, of Cleveland.

Addis said his crew of 25 men heard what sounded like the motor of a big truck, but were unable to see anything through the fog.

I. Dale Weller, retailer and manufacturer of Easton, Pa., living in the mountains because of ill health, told of Miss Granger's dash through the thick underbrush and mud for help.

He was called from his home by Mrs. Ray Addis, because he had an automobile, to drive the hostess back toward the wreck.

Weller said Miss Granger told him the pilot of the Sun Racer had talked to the Pittsburgh airport just before the crash, but did not know the subject of the conversation. Airport records said Pilot Otto Ferguson at 10:10 a. m. had expected to land in Pittsburgh within a few moments.

The newly-decorated auditorium of the Ohev Sholom Congregation will be opened with ceremonies on May 10, it was decided last night at a meeting of the executive board of the congregation.

A committee with N. Plotnick as chairman was named to make arrangements.

Selassie, in Flight, Said to Have Shaved

Rome, April 9 (A).—A report from the northern field headquarters to the Stefani (Italian) News Agency said today Emperor Haile Selassie, the last remnants of his bodyguard fleeing "in panic," shaved off his beard to escape recognition and capture.

The Emperor, whose personal troops were defeated by the Fascist forces on the northern front last week, was reported to be in a region of revolting Azebo and Galla northern tribesmen.

The defeat of the imperial bodyguard, the Stefani reports said, caused a great "political repercussion" among tribesmen.

Scientist Locates Columbium Spectra

Spectra lines of columbium, little-known mineral, named in honor of the United States, have been determined by Dr. W. F. Meggers, of the Bureau of Standards, it was announced last night.

Dr. Meggers' task in locating the 5,700 tiny lines in the light of columbium when projected through a prism is important industrially because the mineral is needed in the manufacture of chrome-nickel steel having a high resistance to intergranular corrosion.

By use of the results found by Dr. Meggers, chemists will be able to identify the amount of columbium in any piece of steel. This should help in the perfection of further improved steels, scientists said.

Wallace Bonus Data Attacked By Vandenberg

Secretary Was Forced to Correct AAA Payment Figures, He Asserts.

Directing new criticism at Wallace, Senator Vandenberg asserted that the Secretary of Agriculture had been forced to correct himself on the information made public on big benefit checks.

He said that on March 23 he had information that a payment of about $78,000 on wheat had been made, but that he did not know the name of the recipient. A week later, he recalled, Secretary Wallace "reluctantly yielded to some ventilation on the subject" and recorded the largest wheat payment as $29,398. Vandenberg then pointed out that on Wednesday of this week Wallace had corrected his first statement with an explanation that the largest payment one year was $78,634 to a California company. About $49,000 of this was in additional payments to tenants on the same California wheat farm.

In the meantime, it was learned that Thomas D. Campbell, Montana wheat farmer, received about $58,000 in benefit payments under a crop-control contract partly covering lands rented from Indians in that State.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes, asked about this yesterday, because it was through his department that Campbell rented the Indian lands at nominal rates, asserted that the Indians would receive about 15 per cent of the benefit payments. He stated that Indians whose lands were rented and included in AAA contracts had shared in the benefit payments "the same as if they'd harvested the crops and sold them in the market themselves."

The Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar Co., it was learned, had received $800,000 in benefit payments and will get more than $1,000,000 when all checks have been sent it.

Police Push Search Of River for Youth

Harbor police continued to drag the Potomac River last night for the body of Donald F. MacCarthy, 24, fourth-year medical student of Georgetown University, whose abandoned automobile was found on Hains Point Tuesday.

Acting on a clew, police transferred their search to the Washington Channel after dragging the river on the west side of the point Wednesday. A blue overcoat and brown hat similar to those worn by MacCarthy when he was last seen were found on a bench on the east side.

The student's father, Dr. F. W. MacCarthy, arrived here yesterday with another son, Edgar, from North Bangor, N. Y., to aid in the search.

Law to Cancel RFC Municipal Loans Is Asked

Rabaut Measure Affects $19,500,000 Borrowed by Cities for Relief.

A bill calling for cancellation of $19,500,000 in loans made to cities for relief purposes by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Rabaut (Democrat), Michigan.

In an amendment to the RFC act in 1932 a provision was made that $300,000,000 might be loaned to States and municipalities for relief. About $280,000,000 was borrow by States. Later Congress provided this money should be deducted in installments from road appropriations for the States. A road appropriation bill passed in 1934, however, provided that the money could not be used for this purpose, thus virtually canceling the State loans.

The RFC holds bonds of municipalities for loans made to them. If the loans are canceled, the bonds must be returned, thus increasing the power of the cities to borrow. Chief beneficiary would be Chicago, which owes the RFC $12,252,000. Next in line would be Rabaut's home city, Detroit, with a debt of $1,800,000.

The bill was seen by some as a forerunner of similar attempts to cancel local obligations to the Government. Hundreds of millions of dollars have been loaned cities by the PWA for building projects.

City Churches To Hold 3-Hour Service Today

Programs on Good Friday Include Musicals to End Lenten Season.

Nearly every Christian church in Washington brings its Lenten season to a close today with Good Friday services.

Three-hour devotions between noon and 3 p. m. will be conducted almost universally, congregations of several churches joining with others in union services. There will be other services in Catholic churches in the morning and evening, and many Protestant churches will have Good Friday musicals tonight.

The Washington Catholic Evidence Guild will conduct its annual open air service at 2:30 p. m. in Franklin Square. Several Catholic priests and laymen will speak.

At Washington Cathedral the Rev. Howard Chandler Robbins, D. D., professor at General Theological Seminary, New York, will conduct the Passion service between 12 o'clock noon and 3 p. m. Services for the day will begin with celebration of Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m. and at 9:30 a. m. Litany will be at 4 p. m.

3-Hour Service.

The annual three-hour service conducted by Methodist churches in the Capital will begin at noon in Foundry M. E. Church. Dr. Benjamin W. Weeks, district superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will preside. Several pastors will take part in the service.

The Washington Lutheran Ministers' Association will conduct a three-hour service this afternoon in the Lutheran Church of the Reformation. The Rev. Howard E. Snyder, president of the association, who planned the rite, announced yesterday that the Rev. J. Luther Frantz will preside. Addresses will be made by Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, the Rev. S. H. Kornmann, the Rev. E. H. Meuser, the Rev. G. H. Eveler, the Rev. Henry Whiting, Dr. B. F. Bieber and Dr. Henry W. Snyder.

Friars of the Atonement will chant the service at the Church of the Immaculate Conception at 7:45 p. m. today. The Right Rev. Peter Guilday, of Catholic University, will preach. 3 Grade Pupils Hurt In High School Strike

Holdenville, Okla., April 9 (AP).—Three grade school pupils were injured, one severely, as 600 striking Holdenville High School students invaded ward schools here today seeking support. Dorothy Dinnis, 10, was jammed against the side of a brick building by the surging students and suffered a head wound.

The strikers demanded that the school board re-employ Ben J. Foster as superintendent. The board selected Jim Ragland, county superintendent, for the place next year. Ragland has not accepted.

Laundry Chutes Have Opening at Each Floor

The problem of collecting soiled linen and clothes and storing it until wash day is an annoying one in many homes. Hampers and bags get unpleasantly full and take up valuable bathroom or hall space.

A laundry chute may be built with openings on all floors, and the linen may be dropped in it, to be whisked away to a bin in the basement where, at the proper time, it will be handy to the laundry room.

This type of improvement may be financed under the terms of the modernization credit plan of the Federal Housing Administration.

Drill Postponed.

For the second week in succession the regimental competitive drill for high school cadets was postponed yesterday because of rain. The drill, with the award of prizes for the battalion and regimental band competitions two weeks ago, will be held on April 23.

Britain's Needy Receive Money At King's Hand

By the Associated Press.

London, April 9.—Westminster Abbey was thronged today when King Edward participated in the age-old ceremony of distributing coins on Maundy Thursday.

It was the first time His Majesty had participated in a formal public ceremony since the funeral of King George, his father. The King wore morning clothes.

Edward gave coins to 142 persons—71 old men and 71 old women, specially chosen. Customarily there would have been 42 recipients of the Maundy money—the number corresponding to the King's age on his next birthday. But by his command 71 men and women received the gifts, the same number that would have been present had King George been alive.

Reminder of Last Supper.

Recipients of the Maundy money, who are drawn from all over the country, must be 60 years of age, have paid taxes and have employed labor. The fortunate ones placed on the list compiled by the royal almoner remain upon it for the rest of their lives.

The purses and bags containing the specially-minted silver pennies, two-penny pieces and groats were borne into the choir of the abbey by a yoeman of the King's bodyguard, resplendent in Tudor uniform of scarlet and white.

King Walks Next.

Behind him walked the King, attended by his lord high almoner, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and other dignitaries.

All carried nosegays of sweet herbs, a relic of the days when plague had to be guarded against. In addition, the officials wore "towels" across their chests, a symbol of that part of the ceremony in which the king used to wash the feet of the pensioners.

The last sovereign actually to perform this act was King James II.

Edward was the second ruler in 200 years to take part personally in the ceremony. The late King George went wih Queen Mary to the abbey in 1934 to hand out the Maundy pennies. The Archbishop of Canterbury otherwise does it.

Spain Sets Date to Elect Successor to Zamora

Madrid, April 9 (AP).—Spain will elect a President on May 17 to succeed Niceto Alcala Zamora, ousted by Parliament on charges of malfeasance 20 months before the expiration of his six-year term.

The government tonight announced May 10 as the date for selection of 473 presidential electors, who, with 473 deputies in the Cortes, will elect a new chief executive seven days later.

Treasury Bare, Pershing Hall In Paris to Close on April 30

Congress' Appropriation of $482,032 Falls Short of Paying All Debts and Satisfying American Legion's Demand for $250,000 Endowment.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 9.—Pershing Hall, landmark of the American Legion in Europe, will close its doors April 30, its treasury empty, the board of directors announced tonight.

The $500,000 building, headquarters of Paris Post, No. 1, and other organizations, may go to creditors unless three-cornered differences among the United States Treasury, the American Legion and Pershing Hall stockholders can be adjusted.

Congress appropriated $482,032.92, funds left by the war-time soldiers' newspaper, the Stars and Stripes, to pay all debts on Pershing Hall and give it an endowment fund.

Debts are about $350,000. The Government agreed to pay all proper claims, but exacted clear title to the building. When this was arranged there arose an objection by the American Legion in the United States, which refused to approve the transaction unless the endowment were $250,000. Pershing Hall officials said they saw no way of reducing the debt further.

None of the creditors took legal steps to protect their claims. Officials of the building corporation said the French government "passed the word" that none should start foreclosure proceedings.

Pershing Hall officials said there was division in the directorate. One group approved the American Legion's demand that $250,000 should be retained as an endowment fund, necessitating the cancellation of large loans by two officials and possibly further reduction of other claims.

Another group contended that Congress appropriated the money without strings and that the law provided for payment of all just debts without fixing the size of the endowment fund.

The heavy debt, officials explained, was increased materially by the fall of the dollar. When the building was erected the French indebtedness was in francs at 25 to the dollar. That indebtedness is calculated now at only 15 to the dollar, an increase of two-thirds.

Hazen to Abandon Gas Tax Proposal

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said yesterday he will not press his proposal for a 1-cent gasoline tax increase or a larger appropriation for unemployment relief than carried in the Budget Bureau figures in view of the attitude of Chairman Thomas, of the Senate Committee on District Appropriations.

Senator Thomas said he saw no need for additional tax revenue and that he favors waiting until the next session of Congress before appropriating more money for unemployment relief than recommended by the Budget Bureau.

The Senate sub-committee today will hold an executive hearing on the traffic problems of the District and will seek to devise a rider granting the District Commissioners any additional authority they deem necessary.

Officer Saves $3,000 As Bandits Get $4,500

Fall River, Mass., April 9 (AP).—Two masked holdup men robbed a paymaster of a $4,500 pay roll today in the yard of the Parker mill. A disarmed policeman saved $3,000 by fleeing from the robbers who shot at him several times.

Paymaster Henry Sherman, of Westport, and Patrolman Thomas H. Ryan were ordered to put up their hands as they entered the mill yard. The robbers took Ryan's pistol and ordered the pair to turn over two money boxes.

Ryan grabbed one of the boxes containing $3,000, and ran for the mill vestibule. Both robbers fired several shots but missed him. Taking the second box, they sped away in an automobile.

Orphan Girl Saves Inmates in Blaze

Cincinnati, April 9 (AP).—An orphan girl's quick action in sounding a fire alarm averted a possible catastrophe today at St. Aloysius Orphanage, the home of 185 parentless boys and girls.

The young heroine, 15-year-old Rose Mary Wurzelbacher, awakened by the sound of falling plaster and crackling timber, shouted a warning to sisters in a dormitory, speedily sounded the fire gong, and then aided in carrying to safety eight or ten boys and girls of kindergarten age.

Fire Chief Barney J. Houston heaped words of praise on Rose Mary.

"She was a very brave girl," said Huston. "Her thought for the welfare of the others and quick action probably prevented a panic."

20-Ton 'Eye' Nears California Home

Pasadena, Calif., April 9 (AP).—Scientists who study the stars will receive a 20-ton glass eye tomorrow to help them peer into distant universes.

The world's largest piece of glass, wrapped in a 15-ton steel packing case, will become the eye-mirror for a 200-inch telescope on Palomar Mountain for the California Institute of Technology and the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

The glass made its last overnight stop tonight at San Bernardino on the 3,300-mile railroad trip westward from Corning, N. Y. The railroads insured it for $100,000, its present replacement value, and the freight charges were $2,400.

A 46-mile run will bring it to Lamanda Park Station tomorrow, where it will be unloaded and sent 8 miles to the California Institute of Technology.

'Passover' Cantata.

"The Passover," a cantata by Anton Rubenstein, will be presented at 8 o'clock tonight in Eighth Street Temple. Lewis Atwater, organist and director, will be assisted by Miss Ann Sorber, soprano soloist, and a quartet composed of Florence Sindell, soprano; Flora Brylawski, contralto; George Myers, tenor, and John H. Marville, basso.

By the Associated Press.

Uniontown, Pa., April 9.—Two residents of the mountains told today of seeing a plane through rifts in fog banks near the spot on Chestnut Ridge where the TWA's Sun Racer crashed, killing 11 persons.

Albert J. Sharp, a farmer, added, before a Department of Commerce inquiry, that the plane's motor was humming smoothly as it passed his farm home at 10 a. m. Tuesday morning.

The investigators have tentatively fixed the time of the fatal crash at 10:20 a. m.

They heard residents of the district in an attempt to determine the exact time, and will move to Pittsburgh to conduct the inquiry into technical phases tomorrow, after wreckage of the plane is burned.

Tells of Plane Dipping.

Sharp's neighbor, Isaac M. Patterson, told of a plane dipping for a moment out of fog 150 feet above his house, then roaring on south toward the high Chestnut Ridge. A few moments later, Patterson continued, he heard a sound like a small explosion, but didn't connect the noise with the ship.

A story of hearing the big ship and later a roaring crash also was given by Ray Addis, WPA foreman and forest ranger, who aided in rescuing the three survivors, Hostess Nellie Granger, Mrs. Meyer Ellenstein, wife of the Mayor of Newark, N. J., and C. C. Challinor, of Cleveland.

Addis said his crew of 25 men heard what sounded like the motor of a big truck, but were unable to see anything through the fog.

I. Dale Weller, retailer and manufacturer of Easton, Pa., living in the mountains because of ill health, told of Miss Granger's dash through the thick underbrush and mud for help.

He was called from his home by Mrs. Ray Addis, because he had an automobile, to drive the hostess back toward the wreck.

Weller said Miss Granger told him the pilot of the Sun Racer had talked to the Pittsburgh airport just before the crash, but did not know the subject of the conversation. Airport records said Pilot Otto Ferguson at 10:10 a. m. had expected to land in Pittsburgh within a few moments.

Wallace Bonus Data Attacked By Vandenberg

Secretary Was Forced to Correct AAA Payment Figures, He Asserts.

Directing new criticism at Wallace, Senator Vandenberg asserted that the Secretary of Agriculture had been forced to correct himself on the information made public on big benefit checks.

He said that on March 23 he had information that a payment of about $78,000 on wheat had been made, but that he did not know the name of the recipient. A week later, he recalled, Secretary Wallace "reluctantly yielded to some ventilation on the subject" and recorded the largest wheat payment as $29,398. Vandenberg then pointed out that on Wednesday of this week Wallace had corrected his first statement with an explanation that the largest payment one year was $78,634 to a California company. About $49,000 of this was in additional payments to tenants on the same California wheat farm.

In the meantime, it was learned that Thomas D. Campbell, Montana wheat farmer, received about $58,000 in benefit payments under a crop-control contract partly covering lands rented from Indians in that State.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes, asked about this yesterday, because it was through his department that Campbell rented the Indian lands at nominal rates, asserted that the Indians would receive about 15 per cent of the benefit payments. He stated that Indians whose lands were rented and included in AAA contracts had shared in the benefit payments "the same as if they'd harvested the crops and sold them in the market themselves."

The Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar Co., it was learned, had received $800,000 in benefit payments and will get more than $1,000,000 when all checks have been sent it.

Police Push Search Of River for Youth

Harbor police continued to drag the Potomac River last night for the body of Donald F. MacCarthy, 24, fourth-year medical student of Georgetown University, whose abandoned automobile was found on Hains Point Tuesday.

Acting on a clew, police transferred their search to the Washington Channel after dragging the river on the west side of the point Wednesday. A blue overcoat and brown hat similar to those worn by MacCarthy when he was last seen were found on a bench on the east side.

The student's father, Dr. F. W. MacCarthy, arrived here yesterday with another son, Edgar, from North Bangor, N. Y., to aid in the search.

Law to Cancel RFC Municipal Loans Is Asked

Rabaut Measure Affects $19,500,000 Borrowed by Cities for Relief.

A bill calling for cancellation of $19,500,000 in loans made to cities for relief purposes by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Rabaut (Democrat), Michigan.

In an amendment to the RFC act in 1932 a provision was made that $300,000,000 might be loaned to States and municipalities for relief. About $280,000,000 was borrow by States. Later Congress provided this money should be deducted in installments from road appropriations for the States. A road appropriation bill passed in 1934, however, provided that the money could not be used for this purpose, thus virtually canceling the State loans.

The RFC holds bonds of municipalities for loans made to them. If the loans are canceled, the bonds must be returned, thus increasing the power of the cities to borrow. Chief beneficiary would be Chicago, which owes the RFC $12,252,000. Next in line would be Rabaut's home city, Detroit, with a debt of $1,800,000.

The bill was seen by some as a forerunner of similar attempts to cancel local obligations to the Government. Hundreds of millions of dollars have been loaned cities by the PWA for building projects.

The Uses Of Publicity.

The example set by the American Liberty League in publishing its sources of income, and accounting for its expenditures, is highly commendable. Probably the influence of the league would have been greater for a time if it had followed a less honorable attitude in this matter. In the long run, however, frankness is the best policy for any propaganda agency that wishes to gain the confidence of the public and secure lasting attention to its views.

If publicity would be damaging to movements designed to influence legislative policies or to secure definite legislative action, then there is all the more reason for insisting upon the protection afforded by publicity. The revelations concerning the finances of the Townsend organization, for instance, have done more to discredit its fantastic program than the most cogent arguments of economic experts. And it looks as though a few sobering facts about the AAA benefit payments will greatly assist critics of this ambitious monument to the labors of the agricultural lobbyists.

If the Black committee can be counted upon not to play favorites in making public the names of contributors to the many organizations that solicit contributions for purposes of propaganda, it will encounter little hostility to this aspect of its work. If the public finds the arguments of these agencies sound, their influence will be felt, regardless of the sources of their income. And it is unquestionably useful to know just how representative the organized groups, purporting to speak for the American people, actually are.

More complete information may reduce the size of contributions in some cases—especially those from high-salaried executives of corporations who are by no means immune to the appeal of the "sucker" list. Publicity will certainly cause prospective contributors to exercise more caution in subscribing to causes. But that is an outcome which should be welcomed rather than decried.

If the facts are known, the people can be trusted to form their own opinions about questions of national importance, without being unduly influenced by the countless organizations which are constantly appealing for a hearing.

Working Hours And Deficits.

One of the strongest arguments that can be advanced in favor of the McCormack bill, to place 250,000 Government employes on a five-day week schedule, is the fact that this policy is already in effect in the Postal Service. It is decidedly unfair to reduce the working period of one group in the employ of the Government without making that advantage uniform. Whether or not the McCormack bill is enacted, a move to divide governmental work more evenly among employes would be very much in order.

Representative McCormack seems to be interested in this proposal chiefly as an example to private industry. He would like to see the Government encourage wider adoption of the five-day week. That objective will arouse a great deal of sympathy. As a practical matter, however, inauguration of the five-day week, without reduction in weekly pay, must depend entirely upon the financial condition of individual companies. For the reduction of working periods by 6 to 8 hours per week would mean increased outlays that might in many cases do far more to create than to diminish unemployment.

Moreover, to impose a five-day week on industries unprepared to absorb that extra expense would only stimulate labor-saving devices and thus defeat the purpose of opening new opportunities to the unemployed. Even though the need for more jobs is acute, changes of this fundamental character must be brought about gradually. A hasty or compulsory inauguration of the 40-hour week in private industry would create far more problems than it could solve.

In a general way, the same principle applies to governmental working hours. If the Treasury were in a sound financial position, with a balanced budget and a surplus to hire additional employes, reduction of the working week would be in line with sound and progressive policy. While enormous Federal deficits are being piled up, however, reduction of hours which lead to higher costs is of very dubious social value. Obviously the Government will not successfully extend opportunities for employment by further weakening national fiscal stability.

Power Vs. Conservation.

Senator Norris' bill to create a Mississippi Valley Authority, patterned after the TVA, has been accorded a properly critical reception. Even some sponsors of the Tennessee Valley experiment are cool toward the idea of setting up a Federal corporation that would dominate economic development in one-third of the entire country. Before venturing upon such an enormous undertaking, they logically contend, the worth of the TVA should first be demonstrated.

Under the Norris bill the proposed MVA would be authorized to construct all dams in the Mississippi River system "deemed necessary or feasible and to utilize such stored waters for the purpose of irrigation, flood control, navigation and the development of electric power." The Senator clearly aims at the construction of a system of large storage reservoirs from which electricity can be developed, although this primary purpose of the bill is carefully concealed by a list of other functions more in keeping with powers customarily exercised by the National Government.

Secretary Dern points out that these various activities are only loosely related, and that such an enormous corporation, operating over such a vast territory, "would function in the field of diminishing returns, thus reduce the degree of control now maintained, with the inevitable result of waste, increased overhead, and loss of efficiency in execution." A similar complaint comes from the Secretary of Agriculture. Thus a major issue of governmental organization arises.

At present flood control throughout the country is handled efficiently by the Army Engineer Corps. Protection of soil fertility is a function of the Department of Agriculture. Control over power development on navigable streams rests with the Federal Power Commission. There seems to be no good reason why all these varied functions, each requiring specialized management, should be brought together under a single corporation extending over one-third of the entire country.

With powerful "authorities" established in geographic units throughout the country, policies of vital importance to farmers, the power industry and other economic groups would cease to be uniform. In place of our national agencies, regional corporations established by the Government would wield the dominating influence. This phase of the MVA bill, as well as the TVA, demands far more careful study than it has yet been accorded.

A more immediate criticism roots in the evidence that the series of dams proposed by Senator Norris would not serve the purpose of genuine conservation. Morris L. Cooke, director of the Rural Electrification Administration, told the Senate Agriculture Committee that "we devote too much time to the building of dams." Instead of trying to control enormous rivers with levees and storage reservoirs, he advocates measures that will keep rainfall on the land. His theory is that the control of "little waters" would make it unnecessary to "slick the path" of large rivers to the sea.

President Roosevelt has taken virtually the same position by his indorsement of the excellent study of headwater streams and their relation to land use recently completed by experts for the Resettlement Administration and two other Federal agencies. This report, entitled "Little Waters," emphasizes the necessity of controlling flood waters at their source. That, of course, can never be done by huge power dams in the channels of large rivers.

Mr. Cooke also points out that all the dams in a great area between North Carolina and Mississippi are doomed because of silt. Many of them are already filled with mud, thus diminishing their value for the production of power. In the light of this expert testimony, it is impossible to consider the Norris bill a genuine conservation measure.

The proposed legislation pays lip service to the importance of conserving soil and controlling floods in order to camouflage its principal objective—the establishment of enormous Government-owned power plants.

A Vote on Americanism.

The House District Committee having voted "overwhelming" support for the Sisson bill to repeal the red rider, the irons shackling District school teachers become perceptibly looser. April 27 is the date set for consideration of the measure by the House. Then it will be seen whether the Nation will longer tolerate this dictatorship over education in its Capital City. The future of American, as well as academic, freedom is involved.

Mrs. Norton is well advised in circulating copies of the record of the committee hearings to the entire House. If the whole testimony of the authorized discussions is read, and if every patriotic Congressman will turn out against the Nazi bloc, the result will not be in doubt.

The bill should of course receive a record vote. History will want to know the names of those national legislators who oppose the red rider and those who support it. And the electorate will want this information for recollection in November.

Against the red rider in this significant roll call will appear the names of all those Representatives who recognize the inestimable value of the American tradition. For the red rider, will be the names of those who are in sympathy with the repressive tactics of Soviet Russia, even though they seek to conceal their love of tyranny under the specious guise of red-baiting.

The French Proposals.

It is trite to say that events move fast nowadays. But it is not superfluous to point out that diplomatic movement in Europe, during the five weeks since German troops reoccupied the Rhineland, has been not merely rapid but constructive. This brief period has seen three significant steps which, taken together, seem to justify more optimism for European stability than has been possible for a long time.

The first of these three steps was the memorandum sent to Germany on March 19 by the other Locarno signatories—Belgium, France, Great Britain and Italy. In this the Reich was politely told that she may choose between some binding agreement for regularized international co-operation, and the development of a powerful alliance designed to keep an untrustworthy government under perpetual restraint.

On April 1, the Berlin Government replied to this, offering to join any collective undertaking in which Germany is treated as a complete equal, but noticeably failing to suggest any of those reliable safeguards against outright aggression which the violation of the Locarno treaties clearly renders imperative for a stable European peace. Now the French Government, in its turn, has issued a critical memorandum on the German proposals, supplementing this with a very far-reaching plan for a real outlawry of war.

The essence of the French plan, argued with the logic and clarity which the world expects from the diplomacy of this nation, lies in the development of a reliable treaty enforcement agency. This, without crystallizing the status quo, would end the fatal doctrine that each nation may be the sole judge of whether or not it shall observe its contractual relations with other powers.

It is not exaggerated to say that the French plan aims at the creation of a European superstate which could provide effective means to enforce international law as between the political units of that continent. What Paris has developed is a reincarnation of the Briand scheme for a United States of Europe, but with the significant proviso that it should be organized even if a nation with belligerent intentions prefers to stay out. Of further significance is the fact that the French Government presents this plan almost on the eve of a general election which will decide its continuance in office.

It is noteworthy, however, that this superstate idea would be confined to Europe, and would not affect in any way the essentially voluntary character of the League of Nations as an agency of world peace. The plan is based on the same idea of regional action, supplementary to League efforts, which underlies the project of the Roosevelt Administration for an "extraordinary" conference in behalf of better Pan-American peace machinery. There is obviously more real promise in this formula of continental accords, perhaps to be later connected together, than there could be, during this period of history, in the original French idea of making the League itself a superstate.

Noteworthy in both the German and French plans is the somewhat wistful picture of the progress which might so easily be achieved in Europe if this basic problem of an assured security can only be solved. The French plan has obvious shortcomings, and many points demanding elucidation. But it will be up to its critics to show that they have a better fundamental theory of securing peace than the one upon which it is based.

For the past five weeks European statesmen have been talking at each other. They should now consider the advantages of talking to each other on the co-ordination and amalgamation of the promising suggestions which have been put forward. Those who really want peace will favor that technique. Those who do not want it will show where they stand by their attitude toward a next step so obvious that its formal suggestion may properly be anticipated in the not distant future.

We're looking forward to the Be Kind to Dumb Animals Week with the hope that maybe somebody will do something for the Boobus Taxpayerbus.

"Sam" no longer is an appropriate name for our paternalistic Uncle. It should be changed to "George."

Figures Of Speech.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The hopeful citizens of Alberta who voted for Social Credit and a $25 bonus per month per adult have been disillusioned. They not only have not received the dividends promised by Premier Aberhart before the election, but they see the stage set for higher taxes. Still worse, Aberhart now has declared that the $25 item mentioned in the campaign was merely "a figure of speech;" nothing concrete at all, just a rough idea of what Social Credit could do if and when it got started.

The Montreal Star has looked into the matter and finds that Aberhart is right, in a manner of speaking. It was a figure—$25—and it was a speech, several speeches, in fact, says the Star. More specifically, it cites an extract from Aberhart's campaign manual: "Each citizen will receive a passbook in which, at the beginning of each month, will be entered the basic dividend for that month, say $25. Will the dividends always remain at $25 a month? No. We believe that the dividends will increase as the standard of living rises."

The Hauptmann Moral.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Bruno Hauptmann's soul goes marching on, it seems. If he died justly, he deserved to be cut off from living men and women—whether by legal death or by life imprisonment, difference of opinion on capital punishment will decide. But to say that Hauptmann died justly because he was "convicted" by a jury of 12 persons, under the circumstances which produced the verdict, is by no means satisfactory to many thoughtful people.

If "conviction" and "acquittal" on the part of our average juries must stand unquestioned, even if legal, then heaven help our civilization! Trial by "one's peers" has long since become an antiquated phrase. With the radio, the daily newspaper, each giving not only established facts concerning purported crimes, but indirectly expressing opinions, the picked jury that can say, member by member, "no opinion formed," in case of an outstanding crime, is apt to be incapable of nice discrimination. Three carefully picked judges would be our only recourse in an instance like that of Hauptmann's.

The entire matter of capital punishment is a relic of barbarism. It does not deter crime, and so long as our newspapers are permitted to put in bold type the sickening details of an execution as in the case of Hauptmann, then let us in the name of decency as well as in the name of common sense, join in a united demand for the abrogation of the law which demands capital punishment. Hauptmann will not have died in vain, if his death serves to initiate a move for the abrogation of trial by jury in cases like his and of a death blow to capital punishment for any crime.

Anti-War Schooling.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How few parents realize that the intrenched system of racial prejudices, religious bigotry and intolerance for peoples of foreign extraction are responsible for a mind set that makes it likely that their dearly beloved boys and girls will be sufferers in the next human cataclysm of horror.

Children should be taught in school to appreciate how easy it is to transfer hate and prejudice from individuals or a local group to a race or a nation. Above all, the true and real economic background of war should be taught. As children grow older in their school career there should be less playing up of the grandeur of the parade or of the returning victors.

This teaching will not result in doctrination of pacifism at any costs, but it will tend to balance the militaristic influences of the present day military education and conscription of youth in France, Germany, Italy and Russia. It will mean that when a nation is faced with war from within or without its borders the rational processes of the intelligence of youth will have greater chance for sane expression and decision because the feelings of youth will not be colored so largely by the martial emotions of playing bands and the goose stepping of the display ground.

Veterans And Farmers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When Secretary Wallace refused to furnish Senator Vandenberg a list of cash payments made to farmers under the AAA, he forgets that anyone can, by simply writing the Veterans Bureau, be furnished with the amount of compensation paid to disabled former service men!

Why is it that the disabled former soldier is left wide open to any busy-body that wants to pry into Government income and the farmer, who plowed under foodstuffs or killed off little pigs and received Government compensation for so doing, is protected? NEW DEAL.
Saranac Lake, N. Y., April 4.

A Virginian's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Franklyn Waltman in Politics and People for April 6 gives reasons to some length why Landon (Governor) is a more available political prospective candidate than Borah (Senator).

Why not simplify the reasons given by saying that while a senator (as Borah is) has for many years a Federal political record, that a Governor (as Landon) has no Federal political record, and as the Republicans have no constructive ideas this year for a platform, they also want to get a candidate to match who has no constructive record of Federal action either, so that both candidate and platform will be non-committal and the whole idea is to be an "Anti," or negative, without a single positive issue to be joined.

Income And Marriage.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with deep amazement a letter in your issue of April 3, signed "Vet Bureau." I am still wondering how a person can go so far wrong on a subject most anyone is acquainted with.

"Vet Bureau" is indeed fortunate that he does not have aged relatives, as he terms them. He is also fortunate in apparently being satisfied to live in Maryland, thereby avoiding the high rents in the District. There are not many of us able or willing to do like he has.

No, the Government does not expect us to marry on $1,440, but it is not too much for a person to ask, that if he or she does happen to marry another Government worker, that they both be allowed to continue working as they would be allowed if one was receiving income from a private source.

The delusion that Government workers all have easy jobs for which they are more than adequately paid is a proposition that always gets under my skin. I know from my almost 20 years of service that this is not true and my own case is not unique or unusual.

W. E. D.
Washington, April 3.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading with interest the letters from your contributors on Section 213. It has been very amusing to me, and I was beginning to wonder if the environment of Washington had everyone, especially Government employes, believing they should be drawing at least $4,000 before they could get married.

The letter in your column of April 3, "How to Live on $1,440 a Year," has cleared up my doubts and I now rest with the assurance there are some rational folks around town. OBSERVER.
Bethesda, Md., April 3.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is refreshing in these days, when the organized complexities of life and the organized minorities in our regime flourish like a Green Bay tree, to find such a clear-cut declaration as that of "Vet Bureau," which appeared in your letter columns of April 3.

It said: "Learn to walk or bicycle." Bravo! It is not really necessary to apply a literal interpretation to all cases. HOBO.

A Woman's Reply.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I be permitted to reply to the letter of "Sentimentalist" in your issue of April 6?

Woman is more strongly endowed morally, ethically and spiritually; there lies her forte—and there lie our vast unconquered frontiers. Woman can well afford to laugh at such childishness as expressed by "Sentimentalist" as we now laugh at the smart little conceits and foibles of our little men-to-be.

Have a good time while you may, "Sentimentalist," for when woman once awakens to her dormant power—your puny man-made fortresses of so-called masculine superiority will crumble like so many dynamited chimneys, and we shall at last be on the way to real progress—woman-directed, and God-governed. PROPHETESS.
Takoma Park, Md., April 6.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We, the committee, wish to take this opportunity to thank you for your generous co-operation in making the all-Government Flood Relief Ball held last Thursday night a success. The returns are not all in yet, but it appears that we are going to be able to turn over a substantial sum to the Red Cross.

We were handicapped by lack of time, bad weather, and the fact that all the departments had already been asked to make voluntary contributions to the Red Cross Flood Relief Fund, but, in spite of these things, we feel that the affair was a success, and we believe everyone who attended had a very enjoyable evening.

You did an excellent piece of work, and we are exceedingly grateful for your assistance.

Destruction In The Parks?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What in heavens name do our political pirates and plunderers hope to accomplish by the ruthless destruction of the natural beauty of our parks?

What a hideous metamorphosis has occurred at Eighteenth and I streets! A charming garden spot, where beautiful lilac bushes abounded supplanted by a desert of dirt and debris. And, Lafayette Square has become a series of eyesores with broad, winding asphalt thoroughfares encircling the park, displacing the picturesque pebbled walks.

It is high time something was done to halt this reckless destruction. Have our people no redress? Apparently not. What can the voteless do? GOLDSBOROUGH.
Washington, April 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am heartily in accord with that right-minded citizen who made, in your issue of April 4, a deservedly lusty protest against the destruction of our public parks. Just such an outrage has been perpetrated in our neighborhood of Mount Pleasant in a triangle made by Park road and Mount Pleasant street, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets.

For 20 years I have lived within daily passing of this park. Over the years a lovely pine tree, wisteria and a hedge of lilacs made it a little beauty spot, inviting, refreshing, and an attraction to the neighborhood. The pine tree went first, and was replaced by a sand pile. Though less attractive, the sight of happy childhood—and what is a more pertinent reason for parks than a refuge for mothers and children in these days of ubiquitous apartments—could quite reconcile one to this change. But not so, the digging up and carting away of the lilacs, which came a bit later.

Then last spring the entire space underwent a complete uprooting. We watched with anxiety the laying of brick walks and the desruction of the sand pile. When the walks were nearly laid, presto, in a day they were completely taken up, and all the brick piled on the sidewalk. In this denuded state, an eyesore, a catchall for quantities of trash, our little park stayed all summer!

Late in the fall workmen again appeared. A border was made around the park, then every inch of the remaining space was covered with red brick, and finally a four-foot spiked iron fence was put around the border! Protest brought only the assurance that we would not mind when the shubbery was planted which would hide it. But to date not a bush has been put in the ground.

That is our neighborhood park. Come some warm summer evening after a long day at work, and rest your tired eyes on the cooling red of its bricks; sooth your jaded nerves studying the grace of its iron-bound lines; commune with clay and cement, not nature, and see if it will inspire you to write an obituary to beauty murdered on this spot while our watchmen, the Fine Arts Commission, slumbered and snored.

OLD RESIDENT OF MOUNT PLEASANT.
Washington, April 7.

The Post Impressionist

Constantinople Still Besieged.

Post Office, Friday.

REPERCUSSIONS continue from our adverse criticism of the Fourth Crusade. You might think there was a Senatorial investigation into the decision of the blind Doge of Venice not to ferry the Crusaders to the Near East unless they helped him take Zara from Hungary. You might think yesterday's editorials charged the Marquis of Monteferrat with the plot that turned the militant pilgrims away from Palestine—to the sacking of Christian Constantinople.

* * *

But we are especially touched by a letter from Mr. John E. Graham, of Fourth and Channing Streets. We quoted Edgar Holmes McNeil's version of the contemporary chronicle of Robert of Clari. Mr. Graham replied:

"Why don't you use the rather complete account by Villehardouin, in his memoirs?"

And we answered: "Because he wasn't in this office—nor, for that matter, was the Devastatio Constantinopolitana, nor Monk Gunther, nor Nicetas — whereas Sir Robert had just jumped from the mailbag upon our desk."

* * *

Whereto Mr. Graham responded: "My reason for writing you was not combative. I've been a diligent reader of your Column since its first appearance, mainly because of its frequent scholarly or cultural articles and your familiarity with matters which seem beyond the ken of most columnists—I say 'frequent' since one can't reasonably expect a man in your position to keep always on the same level. And I have often cut out the column to show Baltimore friends who don't take The Post. So it just occurred to me that, in case you had not read Villehardouin, you would be interested in looking at the other side."

* * *

After such a note as that, how can we refuse old Geoffrey Villehardouin his day in our court?

We shall call his best modern attorney, Sir Frank Marzials, editor of the "Everyman" edition of the memoirs!

* * *

Why, asks Sir Frank, in effect, should we assume that the Venitians sold out to the Saracens? "If there were wire-pullers at work, who labored to deflect the movement, if the Venitians played a double game, then it is necessary to inquire why he (Villehardouin) makes no mention (of these things). Did he write in ignorance? Or did he (indeed) deliberately constitute himself the 'official apologist'" of the adventure?

* * *

Lets get, first, the accepted facts: Villehardouin and the other five delegates "go to Venice to engage a fleet to take the host 'overseas.'" But "worthy" Thibaut dies, "the natural leader of the expedition," and he is replaced by the Marquis of Montferrat. The assembling host "is so reduced that the stipulated passage-money is not forthcoming, and the Venitians naturally refuse to move"—unless the Crusaders help Venice to recapture Christian Zara. Then, just as this is agreed to, along comes the offer of Philip of Swabia to lend his helping hand—provided the host aid also in replacing his brother-in-law on the throne of Christian Constantinople.

* * *

* * *

As to Zara:

"Shut up on the Island of St. Nicholas, near Venice, without the necessary means for advance or retreat, or even for the provision of daily subsistence, the Crusading host was in helpless case. The advance on Zara had no alternative."

And as to Constantinople:

"Leaders and men were without the sinews of war. When Alexius came with his definite proposals, one cannot 'wonder that men of strong political instinct . . . should have thought that the best coign of vantage for an attack on Jerusalem was Constantinople." And Sir Frank makes much of the fact that "only 12 French lords" among these militant pilgrims "could be induced to swear" to carry out the Swabian scheme.

* * *

In short, the Villehardouin-Marzials case is that (1) the Venitians were merely good businessmen, (2) that the Marquis of Montferrat was no Machiavelli, but (3) that the host was honestly anxious to get to the Holy Land and was prevented by a series of unfortunate financial mishaps.

* * *

There it is.

But neither here nor there can this columnist, for one, accept it.

* * *

As to the Venitians: Venice did, a little later, get a most advantageous commercial treaty with the Saracens. As to the schemes of Montferrat and his fellow-generals: the "Crusadera" did besiege, capture and loot two Christian cities, setting up—whatever oaths they had or had not taken—their own government, for as long as it could last, in Constantinople.

And, though they could have done so, they never went on to the Holy Land.

* * *

No—no!

Indivisible Peace

Rhineland Crisis Has Not Lessened Faith Of France That Only Hope For Europe Lies In A Collective Security Formula.

By Andre Vulliet.

Special Correspondence of the Post.

Paris.

IN a crisis such as the Old World is now experiencing, sideline opinions, street reactions and apparently unimportant bits of news often give a more realistic view of the situation than can be obtained from sensational headlines or the heavy interpretations of many political thinkers.

There was little, if any, truth, for instance, in the stories flashed over the wires by one of the leading news agencies in the world to the effect that France was mobilizing and rushing 150,000 men to her eastern frontier, or that she was contemplating withdrawing from the League of Nations and waging a preventive war.

There was plenty of verbal and even printed indignation in France, to be sure, but the reaction of the French people, among whom the writer lives, was altogether quiet and rather of the we-are-done-again sort. Press agencies, however, must vie with each other for hot news with such haste that they can not always check upon what they flash over. They must take chances. It is part of the game.

• • • •

THE mobilization rumor was born out of the fact that all leaves in the French army were cancelled on the day when German troops re-entered the Rhineland. Nothing resembling 150,000 troops moved eastward. But the news originated when a great movement of soldiers took place in eastern France to fill in the underground forlifications with thousands and thousands of men from the garrisons of nearby towns.

It often is difficult for foreign correspondents in Paris to get the news, as they are not admitted to the regular press conferences held by the ministers, including the Premier himself. For instance, while the French reporters see the French Foreign Minister daily and gather at a Foreign Office press conference twice a day, foreign correspondents are not on the same footing and must depend on "high officials," "government spokesmen" or friendships among their French colleagues for news. That is why so many details in many a rush story are not secured direct from the source and are necessarily distorted by the time they are put down in black and white.

• • • •

QUOTING a "French government spokesman," anyway, is taking a lot for granted, as no such man exists in this country. Joseph Goebbels, the wizard of German propaganda, or Count Ciano, Mussolini's official spokesman and son-in-law, have no French counterpart. Neither have they in Great Britain.

In fact, it seems no one can really speak in the name of France, not even the French Prime Minister. When, according to a news agency dispatch, a French spokesman declared that "France is ready to draw the sword now rather than let it be sullied," he was merely speaking in his own name. How many out of 42,000,000 Frenchmen were of the same opinion is hard to know. But one thing you can tell for sure is that only a very few were ready to march.

When Premier Sarraut emulated Chancellor Hitler and stated over the radio, in a speech hastily prepared, that France "would not tolerate," or "would not admit," he was taking a stand, but that did not mean much, as the course of events is likely to show that France is not ready to take the necessary steps "not to tolerate," or "not to admit."

French public opinion is so divided, indeed, that no politician or government can claim to represent it. There are those who would die rather than negotiate with Hitler and those who are ready to forget all about the past and its juridical intricacies in order to make friends with Germany and bury the hatchet. There are those who would do anything to tear away from Britain, and those who think France must stick to the United Kingdom, even if she must thus play second fiddle. The French people are at a loss to know where to go and whom to follow. A foreign invasion would doubtlessly pull them all together to repel the invader. But to think that with their present lack of leadership they are ready for a preventive war is sheer folly.

The inability of the British government to sense its public opinion at the time when Sir Samuel Hoare, the British Foreign Secretary, and Premier Laval were laying down peace proposals to end the Italo-Abyssinian war; the Baldwin cabinet's hesitancy in taking a definite stand in the present European crisis; President Wilson's lack of following on the League of Nations question—these few evamples suggest that democratic governments can never be positive, when signing treaties or making speeches, whether they will be followed. Anything a cabinet member does or says can be undone by Congressmen or Members of Parliament groping their way to gauge an ever-changing public opinion.

When Benito Mussolini or Adolf Hitler rounds up all the loud speakers in their countries and tell listeners all over the world that "Italy feels this way" or "Germany will do this and that," it really means that 45,000,000 Italians or 65,000,000 Germans are ready to answer "Yes." The dictatorial mystic has molded them into one real body.

When a French Premier abides by some treaty provision or when a British Foreign Minister evades a binding clause on the Continent, they both do the same thing. They avoid anything that might sound like a commitment for which their people is not prepared. This is perhaps one of the reasons why the foreign policy of democracies usually lacks punch. It is the best guaranty that they will not take the initiative in a war. But in dealing with dictatorial regimes it lacks their stamina and theatrical appeal.

• • • •

MOREOVER, considering the course of events, one may wonder if treaties in general now have any value at all.

With the pressure of public opinion weighing upon governments, in the shape of inertia in democracies and a demand for prestige in dictatorships, it seems treaties must necessarily be violated and hardly ever strictly enforced.

As a matter of fact, no people seems determined to go to war for the respect of a treaty the interest of which is not immediately apparent. The fulfillment of distant obligations is always problematical.

To die with the Belgians when Belgium or northern France is invaded is a thing every Frenchman can understand. To fight for the French or the Belgians when their countries are menaced and therefore the security of the United Kingdom is imperilled sounds possible to a British mind. Nobody is certain whether the French, despite their alliances, are ready to die for the Poles, the Czechs or the Russians. In case of necessity, they might not see their immediate interest any better than the British are now seeing theirs in the present Franco-German tension.

Yet any conflict may spread as many think it would be sure to do. If peace proves to be indivisible—that is, if conflicts cannot be localized—and if treaties have lost their binding power, Europe may of necessity go back to collective security with renewed faith. That the first trials have not been up to expectations is no sign that the idea is wrong. It may be worked up again in some new framework. And that is what French public opinion really anticipates.

Many Relics of Indians Uncovered in FloodArea

Hagerstown, Md., April 9.—The recent flood in the Potomac River Valley, scene of several big battles between rival Indian tribes that once inhabited this section, has uncovered many fine relics, including arrowheads, tomahawks and utensils.

CCC boys at the Fort Frederick camp, who have been doing flood rehabilitation work have found many specimen. An Indian village is known to have existed along the Potomac in the vicinity of the old fortress, built during the middle of the eighteenth century. This fort was recently restored by the CCC.

It was recalled by old residents that Indian relics and an Indian burial ground along the river, near Williamsport, were discovered soon after the great flood in the Potomac River Valley in 1889. An Indian battle was fought at the mouth of the Conococheague Creek, near Williamsport, in which only one member of the invading Delaware tribe escaped.

Zihlman's Sister Named To Administer Estate

Cumberland, Md., April 9.—Mrs. Emma Everstine yesterday was appointed trustee to administer the estate of her brother, the late former Representative Frederick N. Zihlman, by Judge David A. Robb. The appointment followed a suit in equity filed by Mrs. Everstine as executrix against Suzanne Zihlman, his adopted daughter, and a number of professional men, business firms and others as joint defendants.

Zihlman, in his will, devised his estate to Mrs. Everstine as executrix for the benefit of his adopted daughter. Assets of the estate are shown as $1,860.14 and a large amount of real estate in Allegany and Montgomery Counties appraised at $54,000. The estate is held as solvent and while liquidation will be slow, all creditors will be paid, the trustee averred.

Soil Saving Program Explained to Farmers

Warrenton, Va., April 9.—Mr. John R. Hutcheson, director of the V. P. I. Extension Service, Blacksburg, Va., Tuesday addressed over 200 farmers of Fauquier County on the soil conservation program at Bealeton and Marshall.

Hutcheson briefly outlined the plan of the soil conservation program for 1936. He explained the basis on which farmers could comply for soil building payments and soil conserving payments.

Senate Accepts Plan for Board To Pick Airport

Preliminary Expense Cut to $10,000; Early Action on Field Sought.

The legislative move to establish a District airport, embroiled in controversy for a decade, got a step nearer enactment yesterday as the Senate adopted a revised conference agreement setting up a nine-man commission to select a site.

Earlier Senate and House managers had revised the previous agreement by striking out a $90,000 authorization to enable the site commission to take out options, thus limiting the authorized appropriation to $10,000, which is to be spent for technical services.

Largely because of the insistence of Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, the conferees agreed to split the $10,000 appropriation between the Federal and District governments. This action, it is believed, will establish a precedent whereby the cost of buying land and constructing an airport will be divided equally between the two governments.

Date of Report Eliminated.

The conferees also struck out a requirement that the commision report not later than June 30 and substituted the phrase "as soon as practicable."

House members were pessimistic, however, over the prospects of obtaining funds for purchase of an airport site this year, even though the commission does report before adjournment.

He expressed the belief that it would be impossible to get an appropriation for purchase of land or construction before Congress adjourns.

Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, expressed the belief that Congress may authorize the commission to begin building an airport before it goes home. He called up the report promptly and had it ratified by the Senate, following adoption by the conferees.

The House cannot act before Monday, however, as Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, could only file the report and allow it to lie over at least a day.

Senators Balk Nichols.

Nichols made an unsuccessful attempt to substitute the House bill, with an amendment, at the conference, but he was balked by the Senate managers, who were opposed to the $2,500,000 authorization. The Oklahoman pointed out that the House bill, providing the nine-man commission was substituted for the original House proposal, would permit work on the airport to go forward during the recess of Congress.

The nine-man commission is to be composed of three members of the House to be appointed by the Speaker, three Senators to be named by the Vice President, and three persons to be appointed by the President. The latter are to be persons "who because of their official positions are interested in the development of a commercial airport in the District."

Senate members are expected to be Senators King (Democrat), Utah; Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont.

House members will be Chairman Norton of the House District Committee, Nichols, and either Representatives Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, or Cole (Republican), of New York.

administrator among the several States, in the proportion which the number of each State's farms not electrified bears to the total number of farms in the country not equipped with electric power. The remaining 50 per cent would not be so restricted, but not more than 10 per cent of this remaining sum could be spent in one State.

Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator, wrote Rayburn that enactment of the bill would "improve the standard of rural life" and increase "demands for durable and semidurable goods which will contribute to the absorption of idle plant capacity, and the building and operation of new factories, which in turn mean substantial additions to factory pay rolls and industrial earnings." Cooke said that only about one farm in ten now has electric service.

Hurdy-Gurdy Serenades G. O. P. Conference

Research Staff Is Formed Here By Republicans

By the Associated Press.

The Republican high command yesterday formed what approximated a "brain trust" of its own, hiring seven anti-New Deal college professors to analyze Roosevelt Administration measures and make their findings public.

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher announced that the seven, headed by Olin Glenn Saxon, A. B., M. A., LL. D., a member of the Yale Law School faculty, and aided by 40 helpers—mostly clerks and stenographers—would work in the national committee's research division. He was completely confident, he said, that their findings would help the party's cause.

At a press conference, Saxon joined Fletcher in emphasizing that the reorganized research division would not be a "brain trust," as some have come to accept the phrase.

"This is a research staff," Fletcher said, "not a group of politically ambitious college professors with preconceived ideas, who can look forward to getting on the Federal pay roll in the hope they can reform the universe."

Calls All Experts.

Saxon, a short, stocky, quick-spoken man, said each of his professors was an expert in the field in which he would work and that no agricultural expert would be set to investigating monetary policy.

Two academic keys swung from his watch chain—one a Phi Beta Kappa and the other the insignia of an honorary Yale fraternity. For many years, however, he was in business. From 1924 to 1931 he was a member of the rubber, cocoa and commodity exchanges in New York.

The subdivisions set up by Fletcher and their professional chiefs are:

Taxes and government finance—Charles J. Bullock, professor of economics, emeritus, Harvard - University.

Farm Researcher.

Statistics—Rufus S. Tucker, former instructor in economics at Michigan, Harvard and Columbia, recently with Brookings Institute and the Twentieth Century Fund.

Banking and currency—Frederick A. Bradford, professor of economics, Lehigh University.

Society security and labor—Niles W. Carpenter, professor of sociology, University of Buffalo.

V. O. Watts, professor of economics at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, has been named assistant to Carver, and Frank H. Gane, instructor in economics, assistant to Bradford.

Fletcher said the professors would be put to several tasks, among them furnishing material for speakers and for the use of the platform committee at the Cleveland convention.

Questions Saxon.

A reporter asked Saxon whether he would "take a walk" if his findings were disregarded.

"If anything we put out was perverted," he shot back.

Fletcher put in that the reports would not be suppressed, but that some phases might be withheld if not "timely" when completed.

"The research division was organized primarily," he said, "because many of the Government reports containing statistical, and factual information were not fully comprehensive and in many instances were based upon selected data in the effort of the New Dealers to justify unsound economic and constitutional theories.

"Our purpose is to supply the public with full and accurate information, well documented, from which they can draw their own conclusions."

Fletcher, nattily dressed as ever, joined in a laugh when a hurdy-gurdy in the street below his window temporarily disrupted the conference by playing "The Man on the Flying Trapeze."

"That's what we've got to meet," he chuckled, and winked at his listeners.

Corporate Tax Change Asked

days, may supply the cue for the Senate Committee's tax approach, when it meets to look over the field next week.

A futile effort to sidetrack the President's corporate earnings tax proposals, and substitute a flat corporate income tax of 22½ per cent, was made in the Ways and Means Committee late yesterday by Representative Arthur P. Lamneck, of Ohio, the only Democrat militantly opposing the tax program as now outlined. Lamneck's motion was defeated, 7 to 2. He was supported only by Representative Chester Thompson, of Illinois.

Lewis Offers Plan.

An interesting variation from the Administration's proposed corporate earnings tax, quite similar to the original plan put forward more than a decade ago by the late Senator Jones, of New Mexico, was offered by Representative David J. Lewis (Democrat), Maryland, as a more equitable means of applying the tax.

Lewis suggested that the present corporation income taxes not be repealed, and on top of these be imposed a modestly graduated "persuasive" tax on all net income not distributed as dividends.

In addition, shareholders receiving dividends would receive a credit for taxes previously paid by the corporation on earnings. The latter provisions, he pointed out, would avoid double taxation, while retention of present corporate income taxes would continue a tried and certain form of raising revenue.

Lewis' House Democratic colleagues were not immediately responsive, but it is known that a similar plan is being considered by some Senate Finance Committee Democrats.

Republicans continued to shun the committee sessions, attended only by Democrats. Minority members insisted they had not been "invited."

The full committee left to the Hill sub-committee the problem of working out a definition for corporate debt and the application of a formula that would enable companies with large standing indebtedness to accept a flat 22½ per cent rate in lieu of the steeply graduated schedules provided in the original report, but agreed that some relief should be granted.

Members were unable to say how many companies might be affected, how much income was at stake, or what the loss in revenue from the change would be. Chairman Robert L. Doughton insisted the loss would be "negligible."

The difficult problem of working out a "windfall" tax formula, which would reach corporations benefiting from processing tax refunds, who had not absorbed the tax, likewise was left for the sub-committee to draft.

Sub-committee members insisted that packers who had not passed on the tax, or who had suffered an actual loss in earnings while processing taxes were in force, would not be hit by the proposed 90 per cent tax on the so-called "windfall."

Some Plans Approved.

As now planned, the "windfall" levy would be levied only on income from business dealing in the commodities affected by the old processing taxes, including processing tax refunds in that income. Experts contended there must be a net profit from transactions in taxed commodities, in order for the tax to apply. If there was no income, they argued, no base would exist for the tax.

In addition to the proposal to provide some degree of relief for debt-ridden corporations, the full Ways and Means Committee yesterday approved application of a 4 per cent normal income tax rate on bank dividends, a flat 15 per cent rate on foreign insurance companies, and a plan to collect taxes on dividends paid non-resident aliens by foreign corporations in this country, by withholding the tax at the source on that portion of the companies' business done in the United States.

Borah Enters West Virginia Primary Race

Senator Scores Business Monopoly in Speech in Illinois.

Charleston, W. Va., April 9 (AP).—Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, filed his candidacy today for the Republican nomination for President in West Virginia's May 12 primary.

The notice was received by mail from Washington. It was sent by Carl G. Bachmann, of Wheeling, manager of Borah's Washington campaign office.

The only other Republican entered for President is Leo J. Chassee, of Milwaukee, Wis.

A short time later Walter S. Hallanan, Republican national committeeman, and T. C. Townsend, nominee for Governor in 9132, filed for delegates to the National Convention, saying they will support the Presidential candidacy of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas.

Factions Disagree.

St. Paul, April 9 (AP).—Sharp disagreement arose in the Knox and Landon camps today over whom Minnesota's uninstructed delegates to the Republican National Convention June 9 at Cleveland favored for the party's Presidential nomination.

Fourteen delegates were named at seven district conventions yesterday. Of this number supporters of Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, declared in "our judgment" eight were favorable to him.

Advocates of Gov. Alf Landon, contended the districts elected eight favorable to him; four friendly to Knox, and two who leaned toward Senator William E. Borah.

Two of the votes claimed by Knox headquarters here were in the second district, where 10 of 14 counties balloted for Landon in a test vote, then decided to follow the lead of other districts and send uninstructed delegates. The two delegates, however, said they would be guided by the district convention's sentiment.

Previously, two Twin City districts had elected four uninstructed delegates. The State convention this month will name four delegates-at-large, which will give Minnesota 22 votes at the National Convention.

Borah on Tour.

Peoria, Ill., April 9 (AP).—Senator William E. Borah, asserting big business interests "cannot control me if I should become President, swung into the second leg of his down-State tour today.

The Idahoan, opposing Col. Frank Knox in Illinois' April 14 preferential primary, headed for Springfield and Decatur after telling a Peoria audience last night:

"One of the Dupont dynasty, which has been builded for 100 years by exploiting the common people, said I was a dangerous man. He said he would take anybody but me for President.

"Thank God I have not lived in vain when I can convince those men and the Standard and Sun Oil Companies that they can not control me if I should become President."

Borah asserted prosperity had failed to "seep down from the uppermost industrial strata because monopoly fixes the price of 80 per cent of the things you must have to live, and because monopoly during the boom days destroyed the purchasing power of 70 per cent of all American citizens."

Support Knox.

Manchester, N. H., April 9 (AP).—Ten of New Hampshire's 11 delegates to the Republican National Convention informed Col. Frank Knox today of their "earnest support" of his Presidential candidacy.

The delegation, elected as unpledged, met yesterday and determined to back the Chicago and Manchester publisher.

The eleventh delegate, United States Representative Charles W. Tobey, was in Washington. He is expected to make the action unanimous.

Roosevelt Enters.

President Roosevelt yesterday entered the Presidential preference primary of West Virginia.

Senator Neely (Democrat), West Virginia, forwarded the Roosevelt certificate for the May 12 primary to his State. This was in line with the general administration strategy to seek demonstrations of favor for the President prior to the Philadelphia convention.

Parking Space to Reopen.

The auto parking space behind the Munitions and Navy buildings, which has been closed since the flood last month, will be reopened Monday, Frank T. Gartside, acting superintendent of National Capital Parks, said yesterday.

Sonia Meroff Opens at the Madrillon; Bankoff at the Shoreham.

By Chanticleer.

It looks like a big Easter week-end at La Paree, beginning today with a new floor show, including six little chorines, and winding up Monday night with La Paree's second big amateur show finals of the season. Beween these auspicious high points is a third—the Easter Sunday night Skyride which will go pretty much baseballward. Oh, yes; tonight is College Night.

Sonia Meriff—blonde, feminine and appealing—is placing a new star in the Madrillon's sky this week. Sonia comes from a trouping family, incidentally. And her success has not been due to the achievements of her famous brother either. Mama and Papa Meroff were "show people" for years—vaudeville troupers. Sonia literally grew up on the circuit. She did pretty well in flickers, but the sound of hands being beaten together right under your nose is more enjoyable, sez she.

To see Ivan Bankoff and his partner, Beth Cannon, at the Shoreham in their absurdly human and humanly ridiculous dance, is to see true dance art combined with pathos and comedy and to see a story enacted through a dance, a story of a great dancer who, after an absence from the stage, tries to come back, founders hopelessly and finally comes out triumphant. Ivan Bankoff is making people laugh out at the Shoreham with a laugh of honest amusement.

Maryland Club Gardens Popular.

Spring is just an additional load of elbow-bending for Fred, Mixer-upper at Maryland Club Gardens. It seems that cherry blossoms and the wedding season merely means that the folks gather in at the bar earlier in the day and the mixing begins in earnest at tea time rather than the dinner hour.

For the first time in years, the Russian and American Easters fall on the same day. Result: Big things at the Russian Troika. It's Easter twice over, as a matter of fact. It's the day when all good Russian cooks bring out fancy eggs, known as "paska" and delicious yellow bread ("kulitsch") and caviar and burgundy and delicacies of all sorts. The Troika for the Easter feast.

Marshall and Inez, like all good things, come to the parting of the ways at the Heigh-Ho. They leave many admirers here when they leave tomorrow night for another engagement. But—one good thing follows another. Consuelo Flowerton returns to Pete Macias's club in answer to many requests for an encore engagement. Don't forget the swing trio Sunday nights in the Taproom.

Jacques Webb, a New York bartender, has concocted a cherry blossom—special for the cherry-blossom period here—and to be served exclusively at the Mayfair. . . . Two new tunes now coming up at the southeast rendezvous, Brinkley's. One is "Skee-Ball" and the other "Brinkley Stomp." The boys in the orchestra wrote the tunes "co-operatively."

Hi-Hat Entertains Heroes.

The Ambassador Hi-Hat went gridiron the other evening. Present were Charles Brickley, great Harvard dropkicker; Sylvan King, a past Princeton hero, and of the current crop—Don Jackson, all-American half from North Carolina University. No one of them knew the other two until they were duly presented.

Ames and Adrian, two Washington youngsters, grace the floor at the Dude Ranch this week in a novelty dance routine. Dixie Dyer is bearing down on "Cling to Me" and the band's trumpeter is brought forward to solo "Indian Love Call." Many special frills and extras coming up next week when the Dude Ranch observes its second anniversary.

Thursday night special at the Lotus, to keep in mind next week: Bill Strickland's Variety Show, much of which is broadcast. Stage stars are presented as a rule. Recently heard: Virginia Sims, of "Treasure Trails" (N. B. C. net show), and Charlie Mayer, song stylist recently smiled upon by Paul Whiteman.

Boy Buried in Mud, Rescued by Fireman

Jackson, Mich., April 9 (AP).—Police and firemen rescued 10-year-old Junior Wyatt at the risk of their own lives late today, after the boy had sunk to his neck in muck near a mill pond.

When firemen arrived, only his head and one arm were visible. Calling to the boy to cease his struggles, Herbert Crawford, a city fireman, made his way to the lad across the treacherous surface, with the aid of an empty oil drum, and released him.

Crawford once slipped from the drum. He was pulled from the ooze by Lieut. Ray Howard, another fireman.

Boy Gets Private View Inside Street Sweeper

St. Joseph, Mich., April 9 (AP).—Twelve-year-old Alfred Zuhl knows what the inside of a street sweeper looks like—mechanics had to dismantle one today to get him out of it.

Alfred's bicycle skidded with him and fell in front of the machine as he rode across an intersection. Before Bert Johnson, the driver, could stop the stiff brushes had swept him into the dust box.

Unable to extricate the boy, Johnson called police and city mechanics. A few minutes later Alfred emerged, begrimed and shaky, but unhurt except for a few scratches.

President Is Reported Planning Ottawa Visit

Ottawa, April 9 (AP).—The Canadian press said today that it was understood President Roosevelt would visit Ottawa in June as the guest of Lord Tweedsmuir, the governor general.

Appearing This Week on Supper Club Floors

On the Air Today

JEAN DICKINSON, young protege of Lily Pons, has been signed to a three-year contract with Columbia's "Hollywood Hotel." Obviously sponsors of "Hollywood Hotel" intend to continue the program on a long-time basis. From an auspicious start, with the ballyhoo attendant to selecting the female singing star from a Nation-wide competition, "Hollywood Hotel" became just another radio program. It has been only in the last few weeks that listener reaction has taken an upward turn.

Miss Dickinson, a soprano, makes her first appearance tonight (WJSV, at 9). She has been cast in the role of Virginia, sharing the spotlight with Frances Langford and Igor Gorin. Dick Powell, the principal star of the show, is vacationing for a month.

It seems Miss Pons believes that Miss Dickinson, who is 22, has all the qualifications of a radio and screen star and also for a career in opera. When the French singing star goes to Hollywood with her coach later in the spring it is her intention to place Miss Dickinson in his care.

Followers of Jessica Dragonette will be looking forward to her return to the Cities Service concert tonight at 8, WRC, after an extended vacation trip. She sang last on February 28. Tonight she includes songs of the season—"Christ Went Up Into the Hills" and "My Spirit Was in Heaviness."

Mrs. Norton Offers Revised Lunacy Bil

A revised District Lunacy Commission bill was introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Norton of the House District Committee.

The revised measure, incorporating minor amendments suggested by sthe House District Committee, proposes to substitute a commission of physicians and a lawyer to hold lunacy examinations in place of open-court proceedings. Jury trials may be held, however, upon demand.

The principal amendment authorizes an appropriation of $21,000 for salaries of commission members and other expenses. Another provides for appointment of an alternate for the full-time lawyer member of the commission to serve on a per diem basis at $10. A third amendment authorizes payment of fees and mileage to witnesses on the same basis as paid in Federal courts.

Eight physicians will constitute a panel under the bill, but only two are to serve simultaneously with the lawyer member. They will rotate with the other six doctors.

By Morgan Baker.

Speaker Byrns is urged by the National League of Women Voters to "use his influence" in obtaining an early vote on the Ramspeck bill, placing first, second and third class postmasters under civil service.

BAKER.

The league emphasizes that the measure should not be pigeon-holed. The plea to Speaker Byrns was contained in an open letter from Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, league vice president and legislative chairman, revealed last night.

The bill deserves the support of all sincere advocates of the merit principle, regardless of part affiliation, the league holds.

The league's advocacy of the Ramspeck bill is in conjunction with its Nation-wide "trained personnel" campaign, seeking elimination of the spoils system and the substitution of the merit method of appointments.

"It is progressive legislation," Mrs. Baldwin declares, "and it should be considered by the House at this session. Each Representative should have opportunity for expression on this subject."

"The extent of popular approval of the merit principle to all postmasters is indicated in the poll conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion, which appeared in The Washington Post this month, showing 86 per cent unequivocally in favor.

"Failure of the House to act on this measure during this session would be a bitter disappointment to a large part of the citizenry," Mrs. Baldwin says. "To delay action on this legislation is to hamper efficient public service."

Internal Revenue Fete.

Members of the Commissioner and Miscellaneous Bowling League, Internal Revenue, are preparing for their annual banquet to be held at the Congressional Country Club Wednesday night, marking the end of the 1935-36 bowling season. Maybelle E. Durham (F) is chairman of the banquet committee.

League officers include Garnet R. Miller, president; Laura Bieneman, secretary; Molly Wiseman, treasurer, and Maude G. Cunningham (C), scorekeeper.

Lucille Foster McMillin (F), Civil Service Commissioner, has extended to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt a formal invitation from Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., to be the honor guest at the centennial commencement of the college next month. In connection with the centennial exercises, Mrs. McMillin will deliver the address on Alumnae Day.

Dr. Humphrey Will Speak.

Dr. Harry B. Humphrey, principal pathologist, division of cereal crops and diseases, Plant Industry, will represent the United States at the third International Congress of Comparative Pathology at Athens, Greece, April 15 to 18, along with other representatives from the Universities of Wisconsin, California and Minnesota. They will present papers dealing with disease immunity in plants.

Don't stand around and kibitzer
And tell folks how they might have won;
Don't sit back and nag the driver,
And make his job a harder one.

If it were not for the "hosses."

Marine Corps Promotions.

The Senate Committee on Naval Affairs has approved a bill to place all grades of the Marine Corps on a selective promotion basis comparable with that effective in the Navy. The measure is particularly applicable to majors and lieutenant colonels and would authorize involuntary retirement of not more than 6 lieutenant colonels and 11 majors every year. The ones to be retired would be those not selected by the promotion board.

Washington Scene

Many friends of the late Mr. Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House of Representatives, attended a concert under the auspices of the Longworth Foundation in the chamber music auditorium of the Library of Congress yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Longworth, widow of the Speaker, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Paulina Longworth; Countess de Chambrun, sister of Speaker Longworth, and a small party of friends, heard William Kroll and Nicolai Berezowsky, violins; Nicolas Moldavan, viola, and Victor Gottlier, 'cello, play a program of chamber music. Compositions included favorites of Speaker Longworth, who was an accomplished violinist himself. Among the selections played were Beethoven's Quartet in A and Brahms' Quartet in C minor.

Countess de Chambrun, who was Miss Clara Longworth, of Cincinnati, left Washington for New York City, following the concert, and will meet her son, Rene de Chambrun, who is arriving from Paris with his wife, the former Mlle. Jose Laval, daughter of the former Premier of France, whom he married when her father was the Premier.

"The First Lady of the Cherry Blossoms," as she is affectionately called, Mrs. William Howard Taft, widow of the former President and Chief Justice of the United States, missed the first blossoming of the Japanese cherry trees along the Speedway because of her absence in Mexico. She landed in New York on Sunday and the first blossoms were out before that time. This is the first time in years Mrs. Taft, to whom the cherry trees were presented for Washington by the government of Japan, missed their blossoming.

To Mrs. Taft, the Nation is indebted for the development of the Speedway, for while President Taft was in office she steadily advocated the plan to make the roads and pathways about the Speedway available as a boulevard and recreational spot for the people of Washington.

On fine afternoons she would drive there and at her suggestion a band stand was erected and public concerts were held, drawing hundreds to the spot.

Soon the speedway, fringed with small cherry trees, became a rendezvous for fashionable and official Washington and the Diplomatic Corps, as well as for others less noted in the social column of the day. Most of them appeared in horse-drawn vehicles, for the automobile was a rarity and comparatively few Washingtonians possessed one.

President and Mrs. Taft, during their stay in the Orient when he was Governor General of the Philippines, grew fascinated with the Japanese cherry tree, and Japan, knowing Mrs. Taft's admiration for them, sent the trees which thrived and have now become the sturdy trees which lend such distinction to Washington springs nowadays.

Among the early speedway and cherry blossom enthusiasts were Col. and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson. Col. Stimson was then Secretary of War for President Taft, and had not as yet purchased Woodley, their present home on Woodley road, which they acquired when Secretary Stimson again served in a Presidential Cabinet, this time as Secretary of State for President Hoover.

No doubt Mrs. Philip Owen Coffin, the Miss Alice A. Meyer, of that Administration, daughter of Secretary and Mrs. George Von L. Meyer, will see the cherry blossoms this year, for she enjoyed them so much at that time when she visited them with her sister, Julia. They dressed very much alike and were called "those good-looking Meyer twins." But they were not twins, at all. Mrs. Sumner Welles, then Miss Matilde Townsend, was among the others seen frequently along Cherry Blossom way when the trees were even more of a novelty than they are at the present time.

Many Washingtonians will join the garden tour of life in the grand manner, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, conducted by the Talbot County Garden Club, May 1 to May 4, inclusive. The visitors will see historic Maryland manors restored to their former loveliness, including Webley, home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walker, parents of Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, wife of the former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. When the Walkers purchased Webley a few years ago, Mrs. Walker traveled daily from her Washington residence to the Maryland manor then called "Mary's Delight," a title now abandoned for its earliest name of "Webley." It has been restored to all its colonial grandeur of period furniture and architecture.

Trained Woman Orator Declared Equal of Men

Miss Estelle Allen Tells of Feminine Faults and Outlines Cures.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WOMAN'S PART IN THE coming campaign will depend largely on her ability to talk before an audience, thinks Miss Estelle E. Allen, Washington teacher of drama and public speaking, who has trained many political campaigners—both men and women—in the art of vote-getting by platform and radio.

Her wide experience in this field has convinced Miss Allen women speakers with proper training and practice don't need to ask odds from any man on any platform. "But the average feminine orator today is as artificial as the old-fashioned prima donna or pedantic as the proverbial professor," she said yesterday. "This is the chief reason women speakers today face much the same prejudice that confronted their forebears."

"Women generally listen too much to the sound of their own voices," she went on. "They are too self-conscious, too much concerned with the impression they are making. Men more frequently forget themselves, lose themselves in what they are saying, and are therefore more convincing before an audience. Not always, of course. Occasionally we hear a woman speaker who is as good as any man and better than most. But, unfortunately, women of this type are too rare to remove the prejudice against typical women speakers."

Intelligence Is Required.

Miss Allen is convinced, though, that any intelligent woman can master the technique of modern public speaking, "can be her natural best" on the platform or before the microphone.

Recently organizing groups that might be called "campaign classes," Miss Allen has discovered the need for training of this type cannot be overstressed. She has found, too, that the average woman studying public speaking meets much the same problems as the average man, "but does not solve them the same way."

Self-consciousness, she believes, is the bugaboo facing most feminine speakers. "But is can be conquered," she said. "Mastery of technique—poise, diction and voice—plus something important to say will make any woman lose herself before an audience."

Miss Allen feels the adage "You learn to do by doing" is not the best rule for public speaking. "Good technique is quite as important as practice in standing before an audience," she went on. Of course, a rich voice, good diction and poise will not make a good speaker of the person with nothing to say. But practice, mastery of technique and a real message make a combination that can't fail on a platform."

Lists Some of Reasons.

Mentioning some reasons women with training and experience sometimes lose their effectiveness as speakers, Miss Allen pointed out, "They either grow careless or become overly careful; or they try to entertain their audiences rather than convince them; or they develop obstructions to their personality—such as husky tones or objectional mannerisms in speech or gesture."

Miss Allen believes naturalness is the keynote of modern public speaking, and that oratory for oratory's sake is as out of style as horsehair sofas.

She believes, also, platform addresses in general have changed in proportion to the increasing popularity of the radio. "When you talk before the microphone, the size of your audience depends entirely on whether you have something to say and an effective way of saying it," she averred. "This has had a great influence on all types of public speaking; and is the chief reason the spell-binder of the past would have to change his technique and depend less on his lungs and gestures if he drew any listeners today."

The modern stage and screen has also popularized naturalness, she said. Its importance was beginning to be stressed back in the days when as "Edith Sherwood" Miss Allen was on the stage in New York. More recently, in 1927 (when she went to Hollywood for a two month's visit and stayed three years as dean of drama at the Zoellner Conservatory of Music) she discovered this is one of the chief qualities stressed in training screen stars.

MISS ESTELLE E. ALLEN.

She emphasized, however, the difference between being natural on the stage (or screen) and on the lecture platform. "On the former, you must be not yourself, but the person you are playing. On the latter, you must be yourself—at your best."

Training rounded off with practice turns the trick in both cases, she said. "And the woman who looks ahead now and visualizes her potential usefulness as a campaign worker will get busy—learning by study and practice how to speak in public effectively."

Mothers Must See Children Get Exercise

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

WHEN they are small, children are walked out every day for the sake of their health. Mothers sacrifice hours to the daily chore, satisfied that they are building for the future. Then, when school begins, and there is no longer time in the child's day for such excursions, the mother often sits back satisfied that her task is accomplished.

When the last child has been aired and exercised and started in school, she feels she can return to her own pursuits and devote her afternoons to bridge and club meetings with an easy conscience.

But often her work is not done. She may have made the child go through the motions of regular exercise, but unless she has inspired him with an ideal of bodily fitness and the joy of exercise she has not prepared him for the future.

No school can give the great mass of its pupils enough of the right kind of physical training to keep them fit. Perfunctory gymnastics or games for a few minutes each day, or an hour twice a week, does not suffice, and yet it is all that the average school, with its ever-crowded curriculum, can manage.

To get in any regular exercise outside of school hours requires special effort on the child's part, and effort which he will make only if he feels its need and value. If, however, his early training was conducted by a reluctant mother who herself preferred a sedentary life and only went walking because it was supposed to be good for the child, how can he be expected to feel such a need?

Strawberries Suggest Many Tasty Desserts

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

"STRAWBERRIES, strawberries, fresh ripe strawberries," shout the hucksters in the lanes and streets of Washington. They are almost the sole survivors of a group of food venders who, in former times, made the streets of the Capital vibrate with their cries.

Those hearing the cry of "Strawberries, fresh ripe strawberries" let their thoughts stray to the delights of strawberry shortcake and other delectable dishes.

There are a thousand and one ways in which to serve strawberries. The housewife anxious to win acclaim for a new dessert can achieve her purpose by use of this fruit.

Strawberry Tartlets.

Mix red currant jelly with a little sirup of sugar and water and pour over very small fresh strawberries. Serve and watch for signs of approval.

Bavarian strawberry cream is another seasonable delicacy.

It is made of one ounce of gelatin soaked in a half cupful of cold water for one-half hour.

Then set it over boiling water until it is dissolved. Add one pint of strawberry juice and six tablespoonfuls of sugar. Strain into a bowl set in a large pan of ice and stir until it thickens. Then add one pint whipped cream. Mix well and pour it into a mold to harden. Turn out on a low dish, garnish with whole fruit.

Quick Strawberry Mousse.

A quick strawberry mousse can be made as follows: Take one quart ripe fresh strawberries, 1½ pints of heavy whipping cream and 1½ cups sugar.

Wash and pick the berries. Mash with sugar. Let stand two hours. Fold in whipped cream. Fill mold. Pack in rock salt and ice four hours.

Rich Strawberry Parfait.

6 eggs
1 cup evaporated milk
1 quart heavy whipping cream
1 quart strawberries and 1½ cups sugar.

Mash berries through ricer, add ½ cup sugar, let stand one hour. Beat eggs very light with one cup sugar, add evaporated milk. Cook in double boiler, stirring until thick and smooth. Set aside to cool. Mix custard and berries, fold in whipped cream. Freeze solid but not hard. Serve in parfait glasses. Top with a few select berries.

A strawberry sponge roll is made by taking a quart of fresh ripe strawberries, prepared by crushing slightly and mixing with one cup of sugar. Then make a batter the same as a jelly roll. After baking spread with berries. Cover with whipped cream before serving.

Few Boys of Today Aim at Presidency

Votes Show They Prefer Six Other Careers.

Becoming President of the United States is no longer the first ambition of a small boy. He would be preferably a cartoonist, the chief of the Federal agents, a motion picture hero, a baseball idol, a police commissioner or a prizefighter.

President Roosevelt's job is seventh in a list of preferences of the Boys Club of New York. The members of the club voted on the following question: If you could have your choice of all the jobs in the world whose job would you choose?"

The replies in order of preference were: 1. Robert Ripley, cartoonist; 2. J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the investigating unit of the Federal Department of Justice; 3. James Cagney, motion picture actor; 4. "Dizzy" Dean, baseball player; 5. Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine; 6. Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion; 7. President Franklin D. Roosevelt; 8. King Edward VIII of England; 9. Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia; 10. Walter Winchell, newspaper columnist.

Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy was in eleventh place. Others for whom votes were received were Admiral Richard E. Byrd, Bobby Jones, golfer; William Tilden, tennis player; Freddie Bartholomew, child motion picture actor; Edward Rickenbacker; Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Vice President John Nance Garner.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

MY DEAR MISS HAWORTH: As a regular subscriber to The Post paper, the writer very often notices your column. However, it is seldom that she has taken the time to read what you write, for she naturally is more interested in news.

Mary Haworth.

Nevertheless, today (Wednesday), the writer took time for a little perusal through your column, being attracted thereto by the heading, "To Offer Advice on Family Affairs of Persons Who Have Not Asked Advice Is to Be a Busybody." Miss Haworth, do you honestly believe that? Could you not have said it in a more polite manner? People want suggestions, otherwise they would not discuss their problems with others. Surely this woman involved in your column of April 8 needs not only advice but a sane husband.

You may have been continually associated with men of intelligent caliber, but the writer has mingled with some of all types. She, too, has often thought of writing you regarding the man she is most often with, but after reading that article the writer thinks it would be stupid on her part. Perhaps this letter is a waste of time, for she is certain you will never print this "panning."

Miss Haworth, there are men like this one mentioned in your column, but there are few girls who will take such treatment from any man, even one whom they feel they love. (I speak for myself, a widow, quite popular, but caring only for one man, whom I hesitate to marry, for he runs toward your "column man.")

* * * *

As an intelligent business woman who has had her share of everything, education, fun, a marvelous husband (as nearly perfect as any man could be, since we all have so many faults that have to be overlooked), and now stands on the edge wondering, "What shall I do?" may the writer ask you to rewrite your answer to the anonymous friend who was only trying to help another, and say in a very few words: If the girl has the apparent intelligence as stated by her friend, she will discuss her situation with her husband, and if he refuses to cooperate with her, go to a judge and secure legal advice from him."

* * * *

Heretofore, Miss Haworth, the writer has felt that you have shown excellent taste regarding personal matters, but be a sport and take the brickbats with the flowers. You surely fell down on this job. Still interested, I remain, SUBSCRIBER.

* * * *

DEAR SUBSCRIBER: Yes, I honestly believe I would have been guilty of unwarranted meddling in the affairs of a husband and wife who, to the best of my knowledge, haven't the slightest interest in my opinion had I advised "Anonymous" or any other self-constituted intermediary to incite the wife of whom she spoke to open revolt against the husband whose treatment of her is so displeasing to the wife's family and friends. Had the wife herself made a direct appeal to me, that would have put a different face on the situation. In that event I would have outlined what, to me, appeared to be her moral and social obligations to herself and her child and would have suggested what steps might properly be taken to clarify and safeguard these interests.

* * * *

I take it for granted that persons who wish to avail themselves of such advice as this department is prepared to give will either ask for that advice directly or will unequivocally clothe another person with authority to be their spokesman. You will remember that "Anonymous" made it quite clear that she did not know "why she (the wife) puts up with him (the husband) unless because she is a romantic little person with very definite ideals about marriage and just a little old-fashioned. She may have her own ideas about divorce and denying her baby a father's companionship. It is my contention," wrote her friend, "that she is doing wrong by letting the baby grow up under his influence."

* * * *

In other words, from the family friend's own words, we must conclude that said family friend, while completely in the dark as to what the wife's preferences and thought processes may be, has taken upon herself the serious responsibility of venturing to suppose what in this situation might make for the wife's and child's best good. She says further: "Even though her family is back of her 100 per cent she (the wife) seems incapable of handling the situation otherwise than by accepting her fate . . ." That she is not incapable of handling crises in her life may be guessed from the fact that she stood up to her husband in the matter of refusing to leave him when he wanted her to. Her family, we are told, would have made it financially possible for her to leave him had she so desired.

* * * *

It may interest you to know, moreover, that I was reflecting the best legal thought in such matters in taking the stand that "to offer gratuitous advice in this situation, where advice has not been solicited by one or the other of the two persons most vitally concerned, is to constitute one's self a busybody and possibly a mischief maker."

* * * *

I am sorry indeed if, in defining my position as plainly as possible in a minimum of words and space, I have unintentionally given offense. But good newspaper usage holds against describing a spade as "a digging implement heavier than a shovel and adapted for being pushed into the ground with the foot."

Flowers Lend a Dash of Elegance

Drawing by Irvin.

Easter's Floral Vogue Finds Corsage Center of Attraction

Orchids Have the Usual Preference, but Violets, Gardenias, Sweet Peas and Roses Are Popular for Woman of 1936.

By Frances Mangum.

WHEN CLEOPATRA and Helen of Troy wanted more glitter and glamor they melted pearls in wine or burned the towers of Ilium with fiery glances. Today the lass of '36 achieves her effects by more conservative means. She turns to flowers for that extra dash of elegance.

Especially is that so this Easter. The vogue for flowers, both artificial and real, which has reached unprecedented heights this spring, will make the Easter corsage the center of attention.

Orchids, of course, constitute the Easter bouquet de luxe. But violets, gardenias, sweet peas, roses and other flowers will have their followings.

How, when and where to wear flowers presents almost as much of a problem to the modern woman as the selection of her clothes. Formerly the flower question was settled by pinning the blossims rigidly on the left shoulder—and, of course, upside down. How the myth that flowers should be worn upside down originated, no one seems to know. But the effect became the fashion and as a result stems and ribbons—to say nothing of gilt paper wrappings—became the center of attraction and the blossoms themselves were woefully eclipsed.

Today however, the modern miss bedecks herself in flowers as queens once did in jewels. She realizes they have a place in her hair, at the throat, at the waistline, in the belt or just above, on her coat lapel on the left side of her evening gown. But always, always right side up.

Time was, too, when it was considered not in the best of taste to wear flowers on a tailored suit. Dame Fashion has scouted that idea this season and perhaps for evermore. Not only are flowers decreed for suits but in many instances whole spreads of them. If you choose orchids, stylists say, it's better to wear two on the trim lapel than one. However, if you cannot afford orchids, then a bouquet of violets is both debonair and smart.

In fact, the more you survey the flower scene, the more you realize that flowers are suited to modest budgets and a variety of costumes. The thing is to know what looks best with what. Perhaps the following suggestions might serve as your Easter guide:

If you're wearing a vivid print, you don't want some exotic bouquet that is overshadowed by the pattern of your dress. You'll find a gardenia—one large one, or three small ones—will give that ideal touch of spring flowery chic.

On the other hand, with a monotone suit or simple coat a small bunch of colorful flowers lends a gay and vivid charm. For the fur-trimmed costume few things can rival a bouquet of rose buds, the classic bunch of violets, or the two mixed together.

One smart new flower trend is to wrap the stem of the blooms or bouquet in ribbon the exact color of your suit or frock. The effect is smart, simple and places the accent on the flowers.

Hunger Diet Held Poor Psychology

A bad psychological effect results when a person trying to reduce rises from the table unsatisfied, it was revealed at a recent meeting of New York nutritionists.

By choosing foods low in caloric content men and women who fear overweight may eat as much as they please and still retain a lean figure, it was pointed out. If foods eaten by overweight persons contain comparatively few calories, there need be no reduction in the bulk of the meal.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Arsenic Poisoning.

Arsenic in some form is a widely used chemical. It is the chief component of salvarsan, neosalvarsan and arsphenamine, so generally employed in the treatment of syphilis. We all know that our bodies contain many metals that are indispensable to life—for example, iron and copper. Perhaps we should all harbor a certain amount of arsenic. At any rate, most of us do, but we can be poisoned if we attempt to hold too much. The great value of salvarsan in the treatment of syphillis lies in the fact that a fairly sizable dose may be given because the metal is liberated so slowly that poisoning does not result.

We probably take a small amount o arsenic with almost everything we eat, but the quantity is so infinitesimal that health is not impaired. Delicate chemical processes can show minute amounts of arsenic may be found in the drinking water of arsenic with almost everything grain products, in many vegetables, meats, etc.

Sometimes arsenic is contained in food in a larger amount than can be withstood by the body. As a result symptoms that are puzzling, often misleading and difficult to recognize, may develop.

Food Spray Dangerous.

In a recent report A. B. Cannon states that in his opinion arsenic poisoning is more common than has been suspected. He reviews 107 cases that came under his observation, three of which may prove illumining. These involved a physician, his wife and a 22-year-old daughter. It appears that while sojourning in Switzerland all three were seized with nausea, vomiting and abdominal cramps, followed by diarrhea.

There was marked general weakness, some dizziness, and itching of the skin. Local physicians made a diagnosis of arsenic poisoning from food or water inasmuch as other residents of the locality exhibited the same symptoms. Investigation showed that this particular family had consumed quantities of fruits and vegetables that had been sprayed with an arsenic insect killer.

While recovery was apparently complete, each of the patients suffered periodical recurrence whenever arsenic sprayed fruit was consumed. For example, on returning to the United States a few days were spent visiting friends in Connecticut. Acute symptoms developed after eating washed and baked home-grown apples at 6 p. m. The father, who in addition had eaten a washed raw apple before retiring, became violently ill at 5 o'clock in the morning, but symptoms did not appear in the mother and daughter until two or three hours later. On investigation it was found that the apples had been sprayed four times during the growing season with an insecticide that contained arsenic. Falling hair was complained of by all three of these patients and the blood in each case showed arsenic levels higher than normal. Although the treatment was careful and efficient (sodium and calcium thiosulphate) a return of mild symptoms has been observed occasionally.

Insecticide Necessary.

While there is no occasion for undue concern over the menace of arsenic, yet it must be recognized as a possible source of poisoning.

Fruit and vegetable growers are compelled to use insecticides, otherwise crops would be ruined and there would be no fruits or vegetables for human consumption.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

Ruth Dayton, 18, an orphan, wholesomely beautiful, has been hired to impersonate June Bradley, whom she greatly resembles. At first, bedazzled by June's uncle and aunt, Joseph and Clara Bradley, Ruth believes her mission is one of mercy—to comfort a dying man, June's step-brother, Jim Bradley. June, she is told, is very ill and therefore cannot come to her brother. However, Jim proves not to be dying—though blinded and badly hurt—in an auto accident.

June finds herself falling in love with the man whose step-sister she is pretending to be. She shares the suspicion he voices that the auto accident was deliberate. She finds herself a prisoner, her phone disconnected. Ruth suspects the Bradleys are eager to bring about Jim's death and is almost convinced when Jim's nurses are replaced by Pascoe, a man nurse. She and Jim also are told that the doctor who had been caring for Jim has been called away. Another doctor takes his place.

CHAPTER VIII.

AFTER LUNCH Ruth made her way to Jim.

It was very evident that Jim was not any better. He lay back weakly on his pillows. Smiled just a little as he heard Ruth's step, reached out an impatient hand for hers.

Ruth sank down by the bedside, studied the sick man's face eagerly. A part of the disfiguring bandages had been removed by the physician. They had been replaced by less disfiguring, less concealing bandages than before. "You're almost coming out for air," Ruth said, patting Jim's cheek gently with her finger tips.

Jim nodded slightly. "Doctor had the bandages off this morning." He seemed waiting for Ruth to make some comment.

"Could You see?"

Slight hesitation. Perhaps he disliked admitting the truth. "The room was not even a blur."

"Don't you worry," with sympathetic eagerness. "Perhaps the doctor is all wrong. Like as not he is. You're young and strong, Jim darling. You'll see again."

"I'm afraid not," the sick man said.

"But if you don't—if you never see again, Jim dear, you have me. I'd never leave you. Never." It was a sacred promise to the girl. Almost, for one fervid instant, Ruth lost herself in the identity of that other girl, June.

"Blessed little June. Whatever is to be, I guess, will be."

Jim lay very quietly, his long, big hand in her two little hands. "And if—if I don't get well, little June?"

"We'll not think of that, darling. You will get well."

"It was disappointed, June, that Dr. Benson didn't come this morning."

"I knew that he didn't come." She spoke softly.

"You knew?"

"Yes, she told me." Ruth felt certain that some person waited just outside the door, probably hearing every word they spoke, although, seeming to sense the need for secrecy or perhaps from lack of strength itself, Jim spoke softly, guardedly.

"She? Aunt Clara?"

"Yes. She said a Dr. McQuire called. That Dr. Benson sent him."

"I see." There was a long pause. June (she actually thought of herself now as June) watched his face intently.

"Uncle Joe introduced him as Dr. McQuire. He seemed skillful enough."

"What did he say about Dr. Benson?"

"Nothing. Uncle Joe told me just before he came that Dr. Benson had been called out of town."

"I see. That's what—what Aunt Clara told me."

"I'd fell better, June, I'd feel—safer—if I could talk to Dr. Benson."

Ruth held his hand very tightly as though, by that loving gesture alone, she could ward away the evil that threatened them both.

He was speaking. Very softly. As though he, too, sensed they might have an eavesdropper. Perhaps he knew. The blind, even the newly blind, seem to be compensated by a quick and keen sense of hearing.

"It may be quite true," Jim explained in a very low voice, "that Dr. Benson is out of town. I don't know him so very well—I haven't needed a doctor so often in my life—but it all seems rather queer.

"It seems to me he would have told me that he meant to go, or, if he found out about his trip suddenly, that he would have come for a last visit. I'm afraid it is something else."

"Something else?"

"Is Pascoe good?"

Jim Is Worried.

"Yes, he seems to be, very quiet and very efficient. But I feel queer about it. Oh, June, I can't understand it—there's something about it that I can't understand. Yesterday I was sure that I was getting better, today I'm not so sure.

"I feel so unexplainably weak and I'm worried. It seems to me right now that you're the only person that stands between me and—oh, June, I don't know what."

Pascoe came hurrying into the room. Pascoe was all oily, suave, smoothness. "You must go now, Miss June. Mr. Jim is tired. You see, even a few minutes' conversation exhausts him."

Ruth bent over Jim. Kissed him. Whispered in his ear, "I'll come again, just the minute they let me come."

Pascoe followed her to the door and down the corridor ingratiatingly. "Do you have any time hanging heavy on your hands, Miss?"

The girl stared at him bewilderedly. "I don't know what you have in mind."

"Nothing alarming. I just thought if you had some time this evening we might slip out to a show."

"Who would stay with Jim?" A sudden hope was pounding through Ruth's brain. If Pascoe would take her out to a show, if he would be permitted to do so, surely there might be an opportunity for her to get away, give her a chance to summon Dr. Benson or to summon other help for Jim. She tried to hide the exultation from her face.

"Joe will sit with him. We could slip away to a show. Needn't be gone for more than a couple of hours. Give us a chance to get away. Lord, this thing gets on my nerves."

Ruth turned suddenly, with the sensation that they were being followed. She was not mistaken. Clara Bradley stood just behind them. "What's that you're suggesting, Pascoe?" she asked. Her voice was not pleasant.

No Chance.

"I said that Ruth here and I might slip out to a show and let Joe sit with the patient."

"You've got another say coming, Pascoe," Clara Bradley said emphatically. "You'll stay right here until the job is over and so will the girl. No monkeyshines."

Ruth left them to argue. A queer thing had happened besides the puzzling invitation and the immediate way in which Clara Bradley had settled that.

The queer thing was that Pascoe had called her Ruth when speaking unguardedly to Clara Bradley. That proved, without a shadow of a doubt that he knew the ruse they were playing on the sick man. He even knew Ruth's own name, knew that she was linked with them in the deception against Jim.

For a long time Ruth pondered. She made plans to get away to summon help and almost as quickly as she made them she rejected them.

She remembered that Jim doubted that Dr. Benson had gone out of town, leaving a desperately ill man so unceremoniously. Dr. Benson was much too ethical for that.

It was one of two things, then. Dr. Benson had been insulted by the discharge of his nurses and refused of his own volition to continue with the case or he, too, had been discharged from the case.

Ruth pondered the possibility of getting a telephone call out to Dr. Benson. She could not consider that seriously. If she attempted to use a telephone in any other part of the house she would be spied upon immediately, and prevented from doing so.

No, that was not a good plan, she decided. Much better pretend that she had fallen into their scheme and meant to go through with it without protests.

She looked up the telephone number of the police, memorized it so that she could call the number and summon help if she had a minute's chance.

She memorized Dr. Benson's number, too.

She tortured her mind by wondering which she should call first if she had the opportunity, Dr. Benson or the police? Decided to call the police.

Perhaps only an argument could induce Dr. Benson to come back to the house. And there might be no time for an argument. Surely the police would come if they knew Jim, or any other person was in grave danger.

Played Bridge.

That night she forced herself for long hours to play a game of three-handed bridge with Mr. and Mrs. Bradley. Pascoe was in the sick room.

He had told Mr. and Mrs. Bradley earlier in the evening that Jim was even worse than he had been in the afternoon. "Doc will be coming before midnight, I think," he prophesied.

Ruth played. In spite of the desperate sickness of Jim, the Bradleys were in a very jovial mood. They joked back and forth with each other.

"Don't draw such a long face, Ruth," Mrs. Bradley said, "or are you glum because your job is almost over?"

Action Demand By France Near On Rhineland

European Peace Proposal Submitted to League; Eden Gets Warning.

By the United Press.

Geneva, April 9.—France tonight prepared to demand "concrete action" by the Locarno Treaty signatories should Germany fortify the re-occupied Rhineland zone.

Simultaneously France's proposals for European peace, concocted as a "cure all" for Europe's political, military, economic, colonial and racial ills, was submitted formally to the League of Nations when a copy was handed to Secretary General Joseph A. C. Avenol.

The French warning against fortifications of the Rhineland was delivered verbally to British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden by French Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin.

He said that Chancellor Adolf Hitler's rejection of initial Locarno proposals made consideration of next steps in the European crisis necessary, especially if Germany should fortify the Rhine.

The Locarno powers, minus Germany, are to convene in Geneva tomorrow for their first formal deliberations since those conducted in London last month.

Treaty Infringement.

Flandin told Eden that fortification of the Rhine would infringe article 42 of the Versailles Treaty, constituting a new violation of that pact and requiring stern action by the Locarno signatories.

His statement was interpreted as meaning that should Germany erect forts in the Rhineland, France would demand that the League of Nations, at the request of the Locarno powers, apply economic sanctions.

Flandin denied that France, as reported abroad, previously indicated she would rush troops into the Saar region, returned to Germany by plebiscite in 1935, if Germany fortified the Rhineland.

The French foreign minister said France is willing to have the League Council, with Germany present, discuss the French and German proposals for general reconstruction of European peace, excluding the Rhineland question.

He indicated that as soon as security arrangements embracing Germany are concluded, France will be willing to allow Germany to enter negotiations with Great Britain, Italy and Belgium for a new Locarno pact.

Cool Reception.

The French plan was accorded a cool reception throughout Europe. The German press summarized its dissatisfaction by saying France has learned nothing since 1919. The British press, irritated by clashes between Eden and Flandin on the two major problems of the day, the Rhineland and the Italo-Ethiopian war, had nothing to say beyond commenting that it was a "nice plan."

Every foreign office in the 27 capitals of Europe studied the plan and found, after its great volume was reduced to simple facts, that France offers Germany equality of treatment and colonial raw materials if Germany will put aside for 25 years her dreams of expansion on the Continent.

Yesterday's meeting of the League Council without Italy, and today's informal meeting of the Locarno powers without Germany, showed that France very definitely has swung her sentiment back to Italy and away from Great Britain.

Italy Is Unwilling To Discuss Peace

Geneva, April 9 (AP).—Italy's delegate to the League of Nations declined to discuss with a conciliation representative the terms under which Premier Mussolini would halt war in East Africa.

Salvador de Madariaga, Spanish delegate to the League, who was instructed to obtain the terms, met a cold reception from Baron Pompeo Aloisi, the Fascist representative.

Plainly incensed over the refusal of the League Committee of Thirteen to empower Madariaga to go to Rome for the conversations, Aloisi said he had no instructions whatsoever on the war settlement question.

Italian sources reported Aloisi told Madariaga:

It is rather for one to ask you your intentions than for you to ask me mine. The chief of our government has announced he is ready to send a delegate to Geneva after Easter but he also suggested he would be glad to see you in Rome before the Geneva talks begin. Naturally, we would like to know your answer."

Madariaga, who appeared dejected after his conference with the Italian representative, said he would discuss the problem with the League committee tomorrow.

French Default Alienated U. S., Herriot Asserts

By the Associated Press.

Lyons, France, April 9.—Edouard Herriot expressed the fear today that France's refusal to pay her war debts to the United States had lost her forever the possibility of American aid against Germany.

The former premier, who was overthrown by the Chamber of Deputies in 1932 for holding out for the payment, declared that President Roosevelt told him at the White House in 1933 that he would be "happy to aid France in all international affairs" if only France had agreed to "pay something" on the debt.

"Now," declared Herriot, "the Americans are on another planet. They refuse to aid us."

He expressed fear that President Roosevelt "will have been, perhaps, the last American President who is favorable to France."

Said Herriot: "Who knows whether we will not see in the White House one day some German-American?"

The former premier said Mr. Roosevelt told him to "make a gesture."

But, Herriot added: "I was in an impossible position before the American public, which is composed not only of employers but of workmen and employes."

Costigan

When the Republicans returned to power he became highly critical of the manner in which the Tariff Commission was being conducted, and in 1925 caused a Congressional investigation of the commission. The inquiry brought no satisfactory results to Costigan, and in 1928 he resigned as a protest against conditions. His letter of resignation was a severe indictment of the commission as it operated under Republican rule. Saying he saw no hope of conditions being improved, he wrote, "I am unwilling to devote to a vanquished hope the unexpired two and one-half years of my term of office."

Urges Relief For Jobless.

In 1930 he was elected to the Senate and, under the Hoover Administration, was in the forefront of the fight, along with the La Follette group, for Federal funds for relief of the depression victims.

One of the main interests recently has been the anti-lynching bill, jointly authorized by himself and Senator Robert Wagner, of New York.

Announcement of his ill health was not surprising to some of his friends and others who have observed him in the Senate. Of frail physique, he has been one of the hardest workers in the upper House.

Johnson, his secretary, declined to reveal just where the Senator is seeking rest. It was emphasized that he was to be spared all press of business while trying to recuperate.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, Progressive, of Wisconsin, said last night:

"I am very sorry to hear that Senator Costigan will not be able to run for re-election. I feel the people of the country will be sorry to lose his services. He has been a distinguished member of the Senate and a leader in behalf of the people for economic justice."

Senator Costigan is a native of King William County, Va., and is 62 years old. He was graduated from Harvard in 1899 and began the practice of law in Denver in 1900. There he married Mabel G. Cory. He was a Progressive candidate for Governor of Colorado in 1912 and 1914.

NOT long ago I was like some friends I have... low in spirits... run-down... out of sorts... tired easily and looked terrible. I knew I had no serious organic trouble so I reasoned sensibly... as my experience has since proven... that work, worry, colds and whatnot had just worn me down.

I had been listening to the S.S.S. Radio Program and began to wonder if my trouble was not lowered strength in my blood... I started a course of S.S.S. Tonic Treatment. At the end of ten days I noticed a change... I followed directions faithfully... a tablespoonful before each meal.

The color began to come back to my skin... I felt better... I no longer tired easily and soon I felt that those red-blood-cells were back to so-called fighting strength.

The confidence mother has always had in S.S.S.... which is still her stand-by when she feels run-down ... convinced me I ought to try this Treatment... it is great to feel strong again and like my old self.

"Yes, I have come back to where I feel like myself again."

There is no guess work in the S.S.S. Tonic Treatment... decades of popular acceptance and enthusiastic words of praise by users themselves speak even louder than the scientific appraisal of the progressively improved S.S.S product which has caused millions to say to their friends—"S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Postmaster Bill's Delay Laid to States

Appointments Used as Campaign Fund Lever, Ramspeck Says.

U. S. 5-Day Week Plan to Wait Until 1937, Georgian Asserts.

By James D. Secrest.

"Back-home" politics is preventing House action on the bill to place first, second, and third class postmasters under civil service, Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, charged last night in response to a plea to Speaker Byrns from the National League of Women Voters.

Ramspeck, author of the measure, said that "influential States," in which postmasters are selected by local or State party committees, are responsible for the pigeonholing of the bill which was recently indorsed by President Roosevelt.

"Members of the House who have to make the postmaster nominations themselves want the bill," Ramspeck said. "They're on the hot spot most of the time and would be glad to be relieved of the responsibility.

Patronage Purpose.

"But when the local or State committees make the choices the member is relieved of all the unpleasant aspects of the job, and the committees use the postmaster appointment for patronage purposes and as a means of collecting campaign funds."

The League of Women Voters made public a letter in which Speaker Byrns was urged to "use his influence" in obtaining an early vote on the bill. Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, of Washington, vice president and legislative chairman, stated the measure deserves the support of all sincere advocates of the merit principle, regardless of party affiliation.

"The bill could be passed if the President brought enough pressure to bear," said Ramspeck.

Ramspeck at the same time predicted that the McCormack five-day week for Government employes will not be acted upon by Congress at this session.

Expenses Big Issue.

"This is an election year," he observed, "and the question of Federal expenses is a big campaign issue. Congress won't give Government employes anything more until 1937."

The Civil Service Committee chairman explained that he favors a five-day week for Federal and District workers as well as for private industry.

He suggested that the measure would stand a better chance of passage, however, if the Government workers will consent to a 40-hour week. That would prevent an undue increase in expenditures, he said, as Federal employes now work only 39 hours weekly, although it is spread over five and a half days.

Additional employes would be needed for guards, hospitals, steam plants and the like, where operation is on a seven-day basis, he added.

Berlin Asks Court To Lift Mail Ban

A suit to enjoin Postmaster General Farley from enforcing a recent mail fraud order against the National Board of Trade, the National Better Business Bureau, and the International Better Business Bureau and Frederick A. Berlin, alleged promoter of those organizations, was asked in the District Supreme Court yesterday.

Berlin, through Attorneys Blanken & Blanken said that on January 20 he was cited by the Postoffice Department to show cause why he should not be barred from the use of the mails for allegedly trading "on the good reputations" of well-known organizations.

In his petition yesterday Berlin said that his organizations were engaged in legitimate enterprises and were furnishing legislative information to clients. The assertion also was made that when the hearing was held in the Postoffice Department, a continuance, because of the illness of Berlin's attorney, was refused.

Boy, 13, Struck, Dragged by Bus; Driver Is Freed

Gardiner Darby, 13, was seriously injured yesterday when he was struck and dragged 30 feet by a Capital Trac. Co. bus at Wisconsin and Nebraska avenues northwest.

The youth, who lives at 3510 Macomb street northwest, stepped from behind a street car and darted from a safety zone into the path of the bus, according to witnesses. Paul Hughes, of 3022 Wisconsin avenue northwest, driver of the bus, was not held.

John A. Jones, of High Bridge, Md., and Clara Smith, 32, a nurse in the Presbyterian Hospital in New York City, were brought into Casualty Hospital from an accident near High Bridge.

Jones was treated for brain concussion, but refused to remain in the hospital. Miss Smith was treated for multiple fractures to bones in her face and concussion of the brain. Her injuries were said to be serious. Neither could tell police how the accident occurred.

Convictions on speed charges resulted in two motorists losing their driving permits and the suspension of 23 other licenses when the Revocation Board met yesterday.

Thirty-day suspensions went to Daniel J. Bennett, 1216 Randolph street northeast, 40 miles; Forrest R. Entwisle, 1104 Queen street northeast, 45 miles; James T. Griffin, 514 East Capitol street, 42 miles; Raymond T. Harrell, 176 North Carolina avenue southeast, 40 miles; Thomas H. Herbert, 118 Quincy place northeast, 40 miles; William R. Three Families, Cut Off Relief, Are Facing Eviction Next Week

Cold rain and the approach of an otherwise drear Easter saved three families, in want because they had been cut off relief, from eviction yesterday. Their landlords gave them until early next week to find some other place to live.

Despite the imminence of eviction and the fact there were several children involved, officials of Community Chest agencies told them there were no resources with which to aid them.

Records of the public assistance division showed several other families in which there are so-called employables formerly on relief which are facing eviction.

One man who was evicted was given temporary shelter in the home of the Volunteers of America, while his wife, who was ill, was given similar shelter by the Salvation Army. The man in this case, Mr. G——, first applied for aid to the public assistance division in 1932, but before relief could be given him he had found a job in private employ. He had completed two years of medical school. His wife, whom he married in 1934, had a degree of A. B. They both worked. On February 1, G—— lost his job. Last month he sought public aid. Subsequently he found a part-time job. He paid rent and cut down on food. Relief was cut off. He used his meager money for food rather than rent.

"If this family could have been given help for a month," a relief worker reported, G—— probably would have found a full-time job and no further relief would have been necessary."

Mr. and Mrs. W—— and their six children from 3 to 13 years of age, are facing eviction. The children are in ill health and have not been receiving proper food. W—— was given an EWA job at $18 a week in September, 1934. Physicians forbade him to do pick-and-shovel work because of his heart. Now relief has been cut off entirely.

Another family in danger of eviction is that of a 53-year-old man and his wife and four children. Their rent is $45.50 a month. They rent part of their house for $30 a month. The man formerly was a member of a State Legislature, was in the insurance business, was a policeman and held other jobs in the Government service, in some of which he earned $3,000 a year. He has been cut off relief. Rent paid by the sub-tenants has been used for food.

A 50-year-old father and boy, 15, are earning $4.50 a week to care for another family. The lad sells newspapers when not at school. The father does odd jobs. He had an excellent employment record prior to 1928, when he went into his own ice business. Mechanical refrigeration and competition put him out of it. He refused the aid of a Community Chest agency when it was offered in bygone years. One of his hands is deformed and he is unable to grasp anything in it. Rather than apply for aid last summer the family separated and the children were divided among relatives as long as they could care for them.

The wife and mother is bedridden with cancer. The daughter, 16, cares for her. Now, in their dire straits, relief no longer is available to them.

Beard Starts For Atlanta, Aids Win Stay

Guarded by U. S. marshals much as he had been guarded by his own "muscle men" in private life, the paunchy ruler of racketland left the Capital at 6:30 o'clock for Atlanta, where he will begin serving a term of from two to six years on conviction of conspiracy to violate the District's gaming laws.

Arrangements for taking Beard to the Federal penitentiary were made with the utmost secrecy. They were not revealed until late yesterday, when it was learned decision on the place of imprisonment had been made some time before Beard came into the District Supreme Court to hear Justice Joseph W. Cox commit him.

Commitment was made on mandates of the U. S. Supreme Court and the U. S. Court of Appeals, which refused to reverse the decision of guilty returned against Beard and 12 minor co-defendants 11 months ago.

"Safer in Atlanta.

Officials felt Beard would be "safer" in Atlanta than at Lorton Reformatory, from which, they feared, he might continue to wield the power of a czar over his gambling domain. Police said he still controlled its operation.

As Beard made ready for the journey, the men who were convicted with him—an even dozen "small shots" in his organization of race slips, cards and dice—returned to their families, temporarily free men.

In a surprise decision Justice Cox ruled that they might remain free under bond until probation officials had had time to investigate their records and their manner of life since their arrest with Beard at his establishment in the Mather Building, and their subsequent conviction.

Each drew a term of from 1 to 3 years. When they entered the court with Beard yesterday they fully expected that nightfall would find them in District Jail, or on the way to Lorton.

An appeal by their counsel, former United States Attorney Leo A. Rover, demanded that each man in the case eligible for probation should have a chance to have his case investigated thoroughly.

Justice Cox, after careful deliberation, ruled that probation officials should report the conditions of each man's life and his record by a week from today. In deserving cases probation will be granted, he said.

He pointed out that none of the 12 ever has been convicted before of a felony, and that most of them had wives and children to support.

Beard was almost forgotten in the bustle and confusion that followed the decision.

Wives, sweethearts, sisters and mothers of the men who were all but on their way to prison were in the courtroom.

Beard, whose rise in organized gambling has been like a ride on a magic carpet, was hurried through the courtrooms by marshals.

'Jail Can't Hold Me,' Shouts Myers in Cell

Police took new precautions yesterday to prevent the escape of Ernest Myers from Rockville Jail after the condemned slayer of Allen Wilson, newspaper route man, threatened to gain his freedom.

Myers, under sentence of life imprisonment, alarmed jailers early yesterday when he "threw a fit" in his cell. Screaming reprisal threats and claims that the jail "can't hold me," he tore apart his bed clothing and kicked his cot and bars.

A special police detail has been on hand since his conviction last week to prevent any attempt at his delivery.

Meanwhile, the trial of his reputed accomplice, Albert Sutton, was tentatively set for May 4 in Cumberland.

Parley Is Held On Symphony's Labor Troubles

With the life of the National Symphony Orchestra dependent upon agreement, the dispute between the orchestra association and the musicians' union continued to be deadlocked yesterday.

Musicians in the Symphony Orchestra met yesterday to consider their position in the controversy. Points at issue are the ousting from the union of George Gaul, personnel manager of the orchestra, and on the question of importation of musicians to fill posts which the association considers cannot be adequately filled from local ranks.

At their meeting the orchestra members advised Gaul to take up the matter of his expulsion through the regular channels of the American Federation of Musicians, to which he belongs. Under union regulations, Gaul has two courts of appeal—the national executive board of the federation and its general convention.

The musicians also had their chairman, Thomas Mullikin, present their stand on importation of musicians to Walter B. Howe, secretary of the orchestra association.

Acting as spokesman for the orchestra members, Mullikin told Howe that the union rule, which forbids imported musicians who are paid a $40-a-week minimum from playing other engagements, is a national and not a local rule. According to the union regulations, such imported musicians cannot be admitted to the local union without the consent of that body.

P. U. C. Fixes Load Limits In D. C. Buses

New Order Sets Definite Number to Be Carried in Vehicle.

Counsel for People Not Satisfied, but 'Goes Along' in Ruling.'

The Public Utilities Commission, in an order published yesterday, fixed specific maximum loads for buses of the Capital Transit Co.

The bus-load order marked a change from past regulations seeking to prevent overloading of buses. In the past overloading has been based on the average load of vehicles passing a given point during a half-hour period. Under the new order no bus may take on more than the number of passengers specifically authorized and stated on signs which must be carried in the vehicles.

William A. Roberts, people's counsel, said that he believed the number of standees allowed in many of the buses was greater than should be allowed, but he "went along" with the commission because the new system was a material improvement over the indefinite average-load rule of the past.

Commission officials said the number of standees allowed for each bus was based on a physical inspection during which the buses were occupied by varying numbers of employes of the transit company. Of the buses, 194 were permitted to carry as standees more than 60 per cent of the seat capacity; 5 were permitted to carry 43 per cent of seating capacity, and 40 to carry 70 per cent of the seat capacity. The loads were somewhat lower than had been recommended by Fred A. Sager, chief engineer of the commission.

The new loads represent the maximum load which may be carried within the limits of safety under the commission order, Roberts said.

What will be done if the load limits are violated is problematical. Commission officials are not anxious to incur the displeasure and complaints of persons left standing at stops by buses which already have a maximum load. Under the order prosecutions would be had under the general violation provision of the commission organic law rather than the section authorizing the commission to regulate loading and unloading of cars and buses. That section authorizes the District Commissioners to prescribe penalties for violations which would be prosecuted in Police Court. Prosecutions under the section, on which the order is based, would take the form of civil suit against the company.

Prodigies Have No Endowment Denied Others

By the United Press.

Hollywood, April 9.—Shirley Temple, Freddie Bartholomew and their like are no more intelligent or capable than other youngsters of their age—only less bashful, says Dr. H. W. Halpern, noted child psychologist.

After examining a group of movie youngsters for signs of overbrightness, Dr. Halpern, frequently a special consultant in juvenile courts, pronounced tales of their superior mental prowess to be strictly "hooey." The only prodigious thing about Hollywood "child prodigies" is the size of their salaries, he said.

"I find that child actors are perfectly normal," said the doctor. "They are exactly the same as millions of youngsters the world over."

Advice to Parents.

Lest he start a new Hollywood-or-bust movement among film-struck mothers, Dr. Halpern immediately added that juvenile stars are much less self-conscious and shy than is common among children.

"Poise and the absence of shyness are essential to a child's success before the cameras," he said. "An adult player can offset the handicap of shyness by his knowledge of acting technique, but children when they act are merely being natural. No one can be natural when he is embarrassed."

For that reason, Dr. Halpern counseled parents with stage or screen ambitions for their offspring to spare the rod lest they spoil the child star.

Spare That Rod!

"Nothing," he said, "goes so far toward fastening a feeling of inferiority and deep shyness on a child as a severe whipping."

He did not mention, however, some important attributes of the youngest players which certainly are not shared by children at large.

For example, Shirley Temple's famous automatic smile, which is the envy of half the mimes in Hollywood, and young Bartholomew's clear voice, with its carefully preserved Oxonian accent.

Easter Rabbits to Be Given Writers

Hey, kiddies, do you want a real, live Easter bunny?

The drama editor of The Post has five of these Easter delights which will be awarded to five young readers who most intelligently answer this question:

"Do you think Little Lord Fauntleroy should be pictured with curls and a plush suit, or should he be a rough-and-tumble lad, like all boys of today?"

In "Little Lord Fauntleroy," featured at Loew's Fox, starting today, Freddie Bartholomew portrays the role of the little American schoolboy who suddenly finds himself a wealthy English nobleman. Freddie, unlike the six others who have previously filled this role, doesn't have curls or any of that fancy lace and plush. Freddie is "no sissy." He's a regular fellow and it seems that most movie-goers prefer him that way.

What do you think? Write your letters to the editor of this paper and be certain that they are in his hands not later than Tuesday. On Wednesday he will select the five he thinks are best and will give each writer a live Easter rabbit, as a personal gift from Freddie Bartholomew.

'Rhodes' to Have A Gala Premiere

"Rhodes," the screen production starring Walter Huston in the title role, will have a special premiere at the Metropolitan Theater here on Thursday evening, April 16, at 8:30 p. m. One performance only will be given Thursday night. The feature will begin its regular showings at 11 a. m. on Friday.

Many distinguished guests will be invited to see the first presentation in Washington of this British-Gaumont film, which portrays the dramatic life story of Cecil John Rhodes, the man who became England's empire builder in Africa, the master of Kimberley diamond mines and a mighty figure in his adopted land.

In addition to Huston in the title role, the cast includes Basil Sydney, as Rhodes' best friend, Dr. Jameson; Frank Cellier, as Barney Barnato; Oscar Homolka, as Paul Kruger, president of the Boer Republic, and Peggy Ashcroft, as Anna Carpenter, novelist, who greatly influences Rhodes.

Berthold Viertel directed the production, which was based on the story by Sarah Gertrude Millin. A special camera unit went to Africa and made numerous exterior shots for the production.

About The Showshops

BELL.

ONE by one, the ancient bugaboos of the theater disappear into the dissolving mists of a ravenous and insatiable limbo of negation. Soon there will be no further excuse for that hoary old gag of the two-a-day to the effect that the three worst weeks of the year in the playhouse are "Christmas Week, Holy Week and St. Louis."

I mean to say that old taboos seem to be falling away and a new liberality of thought and action taking their places. This observation is prompted by the extraordinary prosperity of the current Holy Week engagement of "Tobacco Road" at the National Theater. A play believed by many to be unfit for public consumption under any circumstances—a view with which this column does not agree insofar as the version of the Jack Kirkland play being presented here is concerned—"Tobacco Road" sold out its lower-priced seats by mail and has enjoyed near-capacity patronage on the orchestra floor ever since last Sunday night's opening.

With an extra matinee and an added night performance next Sunday, "Tobacco Road" will shatter all Holy Week attendance records at the National. This is a phenomenal record for a week of the year which "show business" has come to look upon as so impossible from a box-office standpoint that frequently it is not even booked, but compels the theater to stand dark for the full seven-day period preceding Easter.

Times and the views of men, it seems, change.

So do the plans of the booking offices. A wire dispatch just to hand as this is written indicates that instead of opening in Boston next Tuesday night for a run, "Tobacco Road" will open Monday night in Newark, N. J., for an ostensible engagement of two weeks. On Thursday of this week Vice Chancellor Alfred A. Stein, of the New Jersey city, signed an order temporarily restraining police from interfering with the play, and ordered Public Safety Director Michael P. Duffy to show cause next Wednesday why the injunction should not become permanent. A committee of seven censors will be in the audience Monday night. If it will be any comfort to Newark, more censors than that were in the audiences here last Monday and Tuesday nights and could find nothing to object to in the play that already has been viewed by more than 1,750,000 cash customers.

Those who were so fortunate as to be present are still talking about the perfectly appointed dinner spread before the famishing local drama desks, critics from the neighboring cities of Norfolk, Richmond, Baltimore and Wilmington, and other invited guests, preceding the preview screening of H. G. Wells' "Things to Come," in the Wardman Park Theater last Tuesday evening. One suspects that the "international menu," served by the Messrs. Carter Barron and Charles Kranz, of Loew's, Inc., and United Artists, respectively, actually was contrived by Managing Director George V. Riley of the Wardman hotels in the Capital. And that, lamentably, may be "Pat" Riley's last gesture for the local crew of gourmands since he is soon to become managing director of the Hotel New Yorker in New York.

WHEN "Things to Come" finally gets around to public showing—and an effort is being made to hurry up the date—it will be noted that Ralph Richardson is cast in the role of the war-lord dictator of the last belligerent State to hold out against the new world order. Mr. Richardson will be recognized as the competent English actor who played Mercutio in Katharine Cornell's stage production of "Romeo and Juliet" and later was seen on the Belasco screen in the film version of Joseph Hergesheimer's "Java Head," with Anna May Wong and Edmund Gwenn.

In a nearby column will be found an analytical psychologist's opinion as to the natural endowments of the child actors of the cinema. It seems particularly timely at just this moment, since Washington, beginning today, will be privileged to form its own estimates of the precocity of four of the foremost of these juvenile prodigies. Shirley Temple is starring at the Palace—beginning tomorrow, by the way, instead of today—in "Captain January;" both Freddie Bartholomew and Jackie Searl are to be seen in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," at Loew's Fox, and, at the Earle, little Sybil Jason is prominent in Al Jolson's support. Mickey Rooney also is in "Fauntleroy," but he is off a slightly higher shelf!

As far as pronunciation is concerned, you can do about as you like with "Fauntleroy" and still prove it by the film. Some of the members of the cast call it "Faunt-ell-roy" and others pronounce it "Faunt-lee-roy." If these pronunciations were restricted to their respective strata of society, we would have no quarrel with Director John Cromwell, but they extend with a fine disregard of social caste from Dick, the bootblack, to the elderly and aristocratic Earl of Dorincourt himself. They should have made up their minds.

Incidentally, every time the "Fauntleroy" trailer has been flashed on the Fox screen this past week, Dolores Costello Barrymore, who returns to the films as the mother, "Dearest," after too long an absence, has been greeted with a round of applause—probably indicating that public sympathy has been largely with her during all those Ariel-Caliban cross-country runs.

Signs-of-the-Times Note.

Cheap enough. A peacock is a pretty good-sized bird!

CLARK GABLE, in the flicker, "Wife vs. Secretary," races out of the club to get to Myrna Loy. You can't blame Clark. Practically any man would race to get to Myrna Loy.

LOY.

Clark hails a cab and next is seen getting out of the cab in front of his house. This is the scene with which Roger Dalton finds fault. Gable jumps from the cab, slams the door and rushes up the walk to his home. He leaves the taxi driver without paying his fare. "I don't believe," writes Dalton, "that a taxi driver would let even Myrna Loy get away without paying the fare, and if I know my taxi drivers, she'd have a better chance than Gable."

In "Love on a Bet" Gene Raymond takes the clothes from a man in a full dress suit. Later, claims Herbert Schoenberg, Raymond appears wearing the full dress suit, and also a top hat which the man didn't have.

"Isn't it wonderful what effect an actor's singing has, even on an auto?" writes Albert Lichenberg. "Harry Richman, in 'The Music Goes 'Round,' is running away from the show he is to appear in. He is riding in an old Ford that bumps and bangs and knocks all over. As soon as he begins to sing, all is silent, except, of course, the singing. The car no longer rattles, the engine doesn't knock, and everything is okay. As soon as Richman stops singing the other noise begins."

Robert Donat, in the flicker "The Ghost Goes West," writes Jean Mulford, leaves for the battle dressed in a Scotch uniform. He is wearing a pair of plaid pants with boots up to the knees. He mounts his horse and rides away. Donat arrives at the battle scene dressed as he was when he left, except for the fact that he has exchanged his pants for kilts. Another neat trick for the movies.

In the flicker "These Three," insists Leah Frank, Merle Oberon and Miriam Hopkins get out of the taxi in front of the dilapidated house in the country. They have several valises with them, but are so disappointed about the appearance of the house that they forget to take their bags. "Where," asks Leah Frank, "do they get their lovely clothes in the next scene?" There probably was a scene filmed showing them getting their valises, but it may have been eliminated to speed the picture.

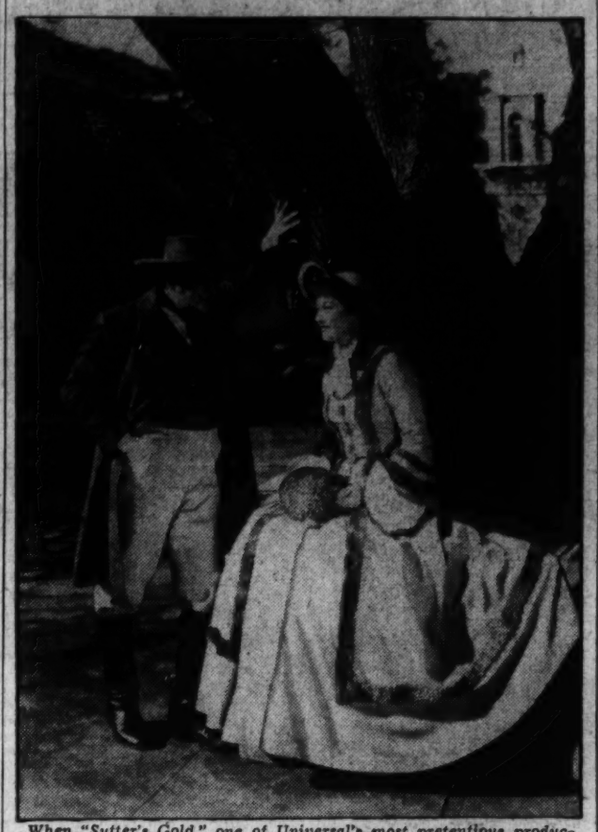
Again Together in Film Biography



When "Sutter's Gold," one of Universal's most pretentious productions, opens on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater today, the leading roles will be played by Edward Arnold and Binnie Barnes, who lent distinction, you will remember, to "Diamond Jim," the screen biography of the late James Buchanan Brady. As they are pictured above, Mr. Arnold and Miss Barnes are shown in the roles of Gen. Sutter, on whose property the first gold was found in California, and the Countess Elizabeth Bartoffski.

The Irish are given to exaggeration, I know, but these things, which I set down here, happened to me last night near 50th street: A man 3 feet, 4 inches tall crawled under the shaggy belly of a camel and handed me a stick of gum . . . A giant Indian strung an arrow to a bow and shot it through the air so fast that the gleam of the arrow and the speed of its passage could not be traced by mortal eye . . . A pretty lady sat on a white horse with an American flag under her arm and talked to me about her diet . . . A man called from a high platform and asked passers-by to stick pins into his comrade . . . Another man climbed into a cannon and his fellows shot him out . . . I saw all these things at 50th Street, in the heart of New York traffic, for this was the preview of the circus at Madison Square Garden, and I thought you should know what unusual things are going on in our village.

Five Managers Pick Tigers to Win Third Straight Pennant

Harris Fears Layoff May Hurt Team

Unconcerned Over Loss to Dodgers, Blames Bad Weather.

Bucky Afraid Enforced Loafing May Strip Team of Edge.

MANAGER BUCKY HARRIS, of the Nats, yesterday dismissed his ball club's 10-2 debacle against the Brooklyn Dodgers, but expressed genuine alarm at the weather conditions which threaten to strip the team of its fine physical edge acquired in training in the South.

"This rain and cold is enough to make a fellow rave," said Harris. "Why, do you realize we have played only one game in seven days. A ball club coming up from the South can't afford to loaf like that. All those off days can undo all the good that came from training in Florida.

"It's not so tough on our pitchers—they can work out under the stands, but the hitters have to be up there at that plate keeping their batting eyes tuned. You saw what happened against Brooklyn—when we saw good pitching for the first time in a week. I'm not blaming it on our hitters—they were just rusty from lack of practice. But a couple of more off days before the season starts, and we're liable to be all out of whack."

Harris laughed off his team's miserable exhibition against the Dodgers when four errors and shoddy pitching contributed to the Nats' defeat.

"Those two wild throws by Buddy Lewis don't worry me," he said. "I saw too much of him in the South to get panicky about that. His arm suits me and I'm willing to go along with the ball team we had on the field that day. All we need is a break in the weather and we won't need any apologies."

Harris was hopeful of putting his ball team on the field today against the Phillies, who were numbered among the Nats' victims in the South. Ed Linke and Jimmy DeShong, two pitchers who have not toed the rubber in more than a week, will share the hurling duties against the Philadelphia club.

According to the Phillies' publicity literature, Manager Jimmy Wilson's team boasts "the finest young pitching staff in the National League, a home-run hitting first baseman, the smartest catcher in baseball and an all-nations cast."

The home-run hitting first baseman and the smartest catcher in baseball of which the Phillies boats are apparently Dolph Camilli and Manager Jimmy Wilson, respectively.

Sharkey-Shucco Fight Victor May Meet Louis

Boston, April 9 (U.P.).—The winner of the return bout between former World Heavyweight Champion Jack Sharkey and New England Heavyweight Titleholder Tony Shucco may meet Joe Louis, the Detroit Bomber, here this summer, Matchmaker Rip Valenti of the Goodwin A. C., announced tonight.

Valenti said he had virtually clinched a bout between Louis and the winner of the Sharkey-Shucco fight after a conference in New York with the Louis interests.

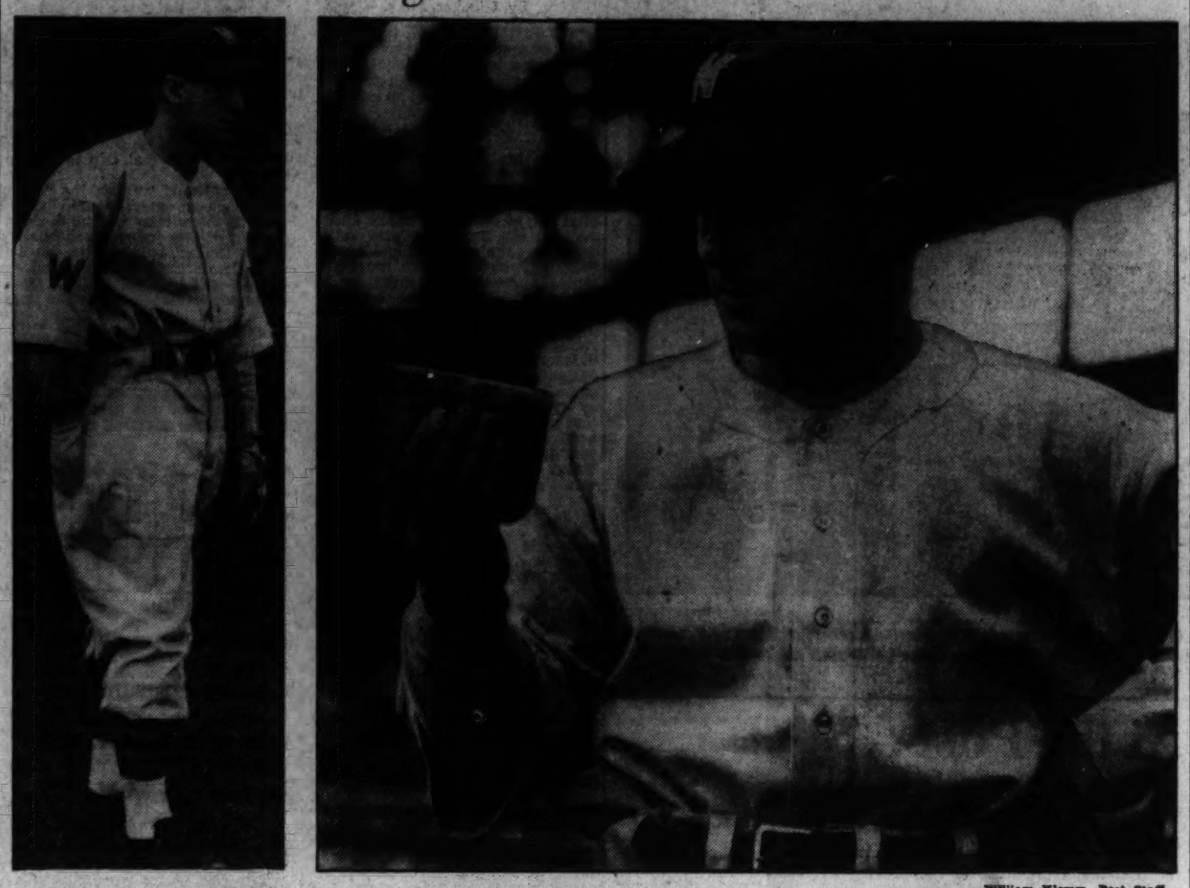
Chemical Heating Pad Lends Steam to Linke's Pitches



William Klemm, Post Staff.

At right, Ed Linke displays the pouch-like heating pad, filled with chemicals that give off a continuous warmth, which he will take to the mound with him during cold weather. Linke has found that the pad prevents the stiffening of his fingers in his pulseless pitching arm and consequent loss of a tight grip on the ball. At left, Linke is pictured with his hand in his hip pocket between pitches, tightly grasping the heating gadget. Despite protests by the Tigers, Linke will continue to use the pad.

Gymnast Unit Hit by Games Chairman

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Lashing out at his Philadelphia critics, Roy E. Moore, chairman of the American Olympic women's gymnastic committee, declared today no place on the team can be bought," and insisted that the members of the Philadelphia Turngemeinde's team would have to "take their chances" against other candidates May 9 in the national tryouts.

Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, representing the Philadelphia gymnastic organization charged that the chances for the American team's success in the Olympic games at Berlin next summer would be jeopardized if selection of the squad were conducted on an individual rather than a team basis.

The disputed point, which for a time threatened the withdrawal of the American women's team from the games, was thrashed out last Sunday before a special arbitration committee appointed by Avery Brundage, president of the A. O. C. The group comprised Dr. Joseph Raycroft, of Princeton; William Penn Burke, of Philadelphia, and Leon Schoonmaker, of New York.

Alabama Game For G. W. Denied

Published reports that George Washington's 1937 football team will meet Alabama in an early season game at Griffith Stadium were denied with great vigor last night by Jim Pixlee, director of athletics at the downtown school and coach of its football team.

"Absolutely nothing to it," Pixlee said, discussing the report. "We certainly would like to have Alabama on our schedule, but we have made no overtures to them, nor have they broached the matter. The scheduling of such a game is purely a fabrication of somebody's fertile mind."

Pixlee and Hank Crisp, Alabama's director of athletics, lunched together Wednesday at a downtown hotel, forthwith giving rise to the rumor that they were plotting a game for 1937. But this meeting was described as a mere social get-together at which shop talk was taboo. Crisp, incidentally, was here on a pleasure trip to the home of relatives.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

THIS department's hat is off to those tolerant State cops who patrol the road running adjacent to the backstretch at Bowie. Never troubling themselves to interfere, they blandly ignore the existence of one of the most picturesque and, I think, one of the most excusable little rackets that these eyes have ever beheld. The backstretch at Bowie is the poor man's betting ring, where the clinking of silver is as steady as the shuffle of dollars over there across the infield where the monied interests lay it on thick.

POVICH.

Out there in the backstretch you'll find the folks who either don't have or don't care to invest the dollar and sixty-five necessary to admission to the track. To the everlasting credit of Bowie officials, they have made no move to shoo out of the section the poor folks, black and white, who emerge from the woods in numbers of a couple of hundred daily to watch the races free of charge and get a bet or two down for themselves.

Vying with the shouts of the candy butchers and hot dog salesmen who roam up and down the rail are the admonitions of the cheap bookies who infest the section, yelling to their customers, "Get 'em down early, folks—we pay the mutuel odds." And out there in the backstretch they don't turn down any kind of a bet. Two bits is enough to get yourself a rooting interest in any horse. Fifty cents is the average bet and if you want to plunge, why, somebody'll find you a prosperous bookie who'll lay the odds against a dollar, maybe two, of your money.

It may be against the law; in fact, it is, what with the State of Maryland reaping no taxes from the betting and bookmaking specifically prohibited, but the copper who took notice of such goings on would be a very mean fellow, indeed. It don't do no harm as this department sees it and it constitutes one more romantic episode in a world that stands accused of losing its romance. You oughta go out and take a look sometime.

WITH good intentions, no doubt, Congressman Marcantonio, of New York, has advised big league ball players to form a union and thus enforce the wage demands which annually result in prolonged holdouts. The gentleman from New York, however, seems to be reckoning without public sentiment which would play a huge part in the success of any such an enterprise as a ball players' union.

The public, it seems, pays the freight in baseball, and this department can picture the vast excitement with which the fans would greet a unionist's claim that he is underpaid at $9,000 or $10,000 per year, as some of the ball players have been claiming. And I can picture, too, the reaction of the public when some super-star of the Dizzy Dean or Lou Gehrig type begins to insist upon $25,000 per annum. That the fans would rally to their aid against the club owners, I doubt.

The regimentation of ball players in salary groups would be an impossible task, anyway. Firstly, the ball players themselves are engaged in an industry where professional jealousy abounds, and they are a selfish lot. Their major concern is the size of their own contract and if they can wheedle satisfactory terms out of a club owner at the expense of a less fortunate co-worker, why, that's all right, too.

And the person who would dare to adjust the values of ball players from year to year would be laughed out of the league. A guy who starred in one season, and who is being paid on that basis for the next, is very liable to prove a colossal flop and any attempt to scale salaries along union lines would defeat itself. Furthermore, it is significant that the ball players of modern times have never asked for a union. They don't want it, which ought to be a pretty fair indication that it wouldn't work.

In Short—

Clark Griffith, who rears and snorts at the mention of a ball players' union, was one of the organizers of the old Baseball Brotherhood that attempted to unionize the game back in the 90's . . . The Cardinals' profits from their concession stands in the park total more than the net income of half the clubs in the league . . . The Yankees, who rent out their concessions to the Harry Stevens firm, a few years ago received $147,000 as their share of the profits . . . Buck Newsom's dad bet $25 against a bale of cotton with Van Mungo's father that his boy would beat Mungo when the Nats met the Dodgers last Thursday . . . and lost . . . Mel Ott was a chesty guy when, at the age of 16, he reported to the New York Giants at New Orleans . . . "Do you play anything besides third base?" he was asked by the late John McGraw . . . "Sure," said Ott, "I used to play the outfield when I was a kid." . . . Reports from Detroit intimate that the Tigers are suffering greatly on the defense as a result of playing Al Simmons in centerfield . . . a territory that formerly was played by Jo-Jo White, the fastest of all the Tiger outfielders.

Estelle Lawson, Titlist, Is Out Of Tourney

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 9.—Two New England girls and a pair from South Carolina strode into the semifinals of the North and South women's golf championship today as Estelle Lawson, of Chapel Hill, N. C., defending title-holder, was eliminated.

Never quite up to the form which carried her to the title last year, Miss Lawson fell 2 up before the steady shot-making of Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C.

Advancing to the semifinals along with the Greenville girl were Kathryn Hemphill, Columbia, S. C., Deborah Verry, Worcester, Mass., and Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I. Miss Cothran plays Miss Verry tomorrow and Miss Hemphill plays Miss Bauer, thus making it a North-South battle in both brackets.

Miss Hemphill gained the largest margin of victory in the quarter-finals, taking an early lead over Mary Kuhn, of Pittsburgh, and playing excellent golf to win handily, 5 and 4.

Miss Bauer also played well, and needed to, to defeat Betty Abernathy, of Pittsburgh. Out in 41, Miss Bauer was 3 up at the turn and made it dormie on the fifteenth. She lost the sixteenth to a birdie, however, but closed out the match on the seventeenth with a par 3, winning 3 and 1.

Miss Verry was out in 42 and turned 1 up on Priscilla Dennett, of Boston. She then won three holes in a row, beginning with the twelfth, to win, 4 and 3.

Red Sox Are Held, 2-1, By Holy Cross Nine

Worcester, Mass., April 9 (AP).—Boston's gold-plated Red Sox had to battle to the last ditch to gain a 2-1 victory over the Holy Cross College nine in an exhibition baseball game here today.

Their big bats checked by the steady pitching of Bruninghaus and Lefebve and the spectacular defensive play of the Collegians, the major leaguers had to wait until the ninth inning to push home the winning marker.

A base on balls to Jimmy Foxx, the Crusaders' lone error of the day, and Dickey's drive to center which Canty barely failed to hold accounted for Boston's decisive tally.

Coolidge, Former Skate Champion, Dead at 30

Boston, April 9 (AP).—Thornton Coolidge, 30, of Boston, twice winner of the national pair ice-skating championship with Maribel Vinson, died today.

Coolidge, who was graduated from Harvard in 1928, won the skating title at New Haven, Conn., in 1928 and a year later in New York.

Roosevelt High's Game With W. & L. Frosh Off

Lexington, Va., April 9.—Roosevelt High School's baseball team of Washington arrived here today in a deluge for its baseball game with the Washington and Lee University freshmen.

Firpo, 40, Gray, and Confident, To Become the Wild Bull Again

By the United Press.

BUENOS AIRES, April 9.—Luis Angel Firpo, the black-haired free-swinging Wild Bull of the Pampas, has hit the comeback trail.

Gray at the temples and only a few months short of 40, the man who almost won the heavyweight title from Jack Dempsey in 1923, claimed that his return to the ring was not inspired by the need for money. Oh, no—"I love the fight game," the swarthy Argentino said today.

Firpo, who battered Dempsey through the ropes in the first round only to be kayoed himself in the second, was reminded that no heavyweight ever made a successful comeback—that Dempsey, Sharkey, Carnera and others failed to smash back into the picture.

"My case is a little different," he said. "You see, most fighters who try to come back after a long layoff either do so urged by their friends or through financial difficulties and, after some five or six months training, they figure they're as good as they ever were. Personally, I never have left off training—my 224 pounds prove that. I simply haven't fought, that's all?"

What were Firpo's immediate plans?

"I'm enthusiastically preparing to resume fighting," he said. "I'm certain my first match will be soon. Then I intend to tour the interior of Argentina, go to Brazil and, if I'm successful, head for New York where I'll fight anyone who wants to meet me. If I fail here in South America, then it's curtains—definitely."

Firpo's manager has several fights on tap. Hans Birkie, of Germany, who is in California, is being sought. Present plans are for Birkie to meet Arturo Godoy, of Chile, and then fight Firpo.

The beetle-browned Argentino, preparing to workout in a local gymnasium, said he "feels ready to fight the Twentieth Century Limited."

U. S.-Mexican Cup Teams to Play Today

American Net Stars Are Favored to Defeat Invaders.

Australia, Germany and Great Britain Rated on Par With U. S.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., April 9.—Strongly favored net stars of the United States will begin a campaign to regain the Davis Cup from Europe tomorrow as they enter first-round matches with Mexico here.

Experts give the youths from the neighboring republic little chance to win even one of the five matches.

Wilmer Allison, captain of the United States team, was confident tonight that Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, of Atlanta, and Don Budge, 20-year-old Californian, would supply two of the three necessary victories tomorrow.

The draw pitted Budge against Esteban Reyes, who scored the only Mexican triumph last year by defeating Gene Mako, of California, national intercollegiate champion. Grant drew Daniel Hernandez, Mexico's 18-year-old prep school star, who eked out a victory over Reyes in a recent tournament at Mexico City.

Allison and John van Ryn, of Philadelphia, will represent the United States in doubles Saturday against Marco Mestre and Flavio Martinez. The final singles are scheduled for Sunday, with Grant playing Reyes and Budge meeting Hernandez.

On the eve of the first match the players shared Capt. Allison's belief that the United States, Australia, Great Britain and Germany had about an equal chance to capture the prized trophy. They felt Australia, with its doubles combination of Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist, was the highest hurdle before the final with Great Britain.

Australia will meet the winner of the United States-Mexico matches at Philadelphia next month.

Miller-Sarron Tickets Popular

The Freddy Miller-Pete Sarron featherweight championship bout at Griffith Stadium May 11 will be a complete sell-out long before ring time if advance sale is any criterion.

Although neighborhood posters have not been put up and the intensive publicity drive planned is hardly under way, the distribution of general admission tickets through the various precincts has been nothing short of remarkable.

As an example, the First Precinct was issued 1,200 tickets on Wednesday morning. By noon they were sold out. Another batch of 400 was rushed to No. 1 that afternoon—and they were all gone by morning. In other precincts the reaction has been much the same.

Lowry Tackles Duffy In Semifinal at Arena

The next fighter to dispute Phil Furr's District welterweight championship may be unveiled at Turner's Arena next Monday night when Bob Lowry tackles Jack Duffy in a six-round semifinal to the Charley Massare-Al Delaney main bout.

Furr has expressed a willingness to clean up the local field before taking on Barney Ross or some other nationally prominent 145-pounder. Lowry, another local lad, has won seven consecutive out-of-town bouts, whipped Johnny Santos and held Lew Raymond to a draw here.

Baer vs. Mountain.

Los Angeles, April 9 (AP).—It sounds like ballyhoo—but Lou Daro, Los Angeles wrestling promoter, announced tonight Max Baer had agreed to meet Man Mountain Dean, bearded mat giant, in a mixed boxing-grappling match.

Daro said he hoped to stage the affair at Wrigley Field, probably next month.

201,000 to See Opening Day Baseball

Largest Crowd Is Predicted for Giants' Game With Dodgers.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Major League owners, optimistic to the last, agreed today that Tuesday, opening day, would be one of golden sunshine and estimated that 201,000 persons will be in the stands.

In the event of inclement weather they will settle for 150,000, they admit.

Largest crowd of the day is expected to watch the Giants and Dodgers at the Polo Grounds. All reserved seats have been sold already and Giants' officials predict that 40,000 unreserved seats will be sold Tuesday. This will kite the crowd to 58,000.

In Cincinnati, Reds' officials are not even taking a chance on the weather. They have sold over 25,000 tickets already for their game with the Pirates and the capacity of 33,000 is anticipated.

Capacity crowds of 25,000 also loom as the World Champion Tigers start defense of their title against the Indians at Cleveland, and the Cubs open their drive for another pennant against the Cardinals at St. Louis.

President Roosevelt, just back from the South, should be in fine condition for the opener in the Capital between the Nationals and the Yanks, but even this fact is not expected to fill the park. Only 20,000 were anticipated today, 12,000 less than capacity.

Harris On Air With McDonald

Bucky Harris' thoughts on the 1936 pennant race will be subjected to the scrutiny of Arch McDonald tonight at 6:15 o'clock on his "Peoples Sports Review" radio program over Station WJSV.

McDonald will interview the Washington manager not only with respect to the pre-pennant race situation, but in connection with the new faces that appear on Harris' Washington Club this season.

The Harris interview before McDonald's microphone is one of the series the radio sports commentator is conducting preliminary to the opening of the season, when he will put on the air not only the inaugural game but all of the Nats' out-of-town contests through the facilities of The Washington Post.

Nats Put in Fifth Place; Athletics Win Last Position Easily.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—The Detroit Tigers, world champions last season for the first time in history, will win their third straight American League pennant, according to a symposium of the managers gathered today by the United Press.

Five managers named the Tigers to repeat. The poll showed that the hottest race will be for second place where the Boston Red Sox, New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians are almost even favorites.

Two managers picked the Tigers for second. Connie Mack, venerable head of the Philadelphia Athletics, declined to predict the order of finish. He said: "all clubs have a chance to win and the Athletics will fool many of the wise boys."

Two managers picked the Yankees to finish first but the rest of them relegated Joe McCarthy's men to third and fourth.

Awarding points on a basis of eight for first, seven for second and so on down the line, the Tigers received 54. The Yankees were second with 43½; Cleveland, third, 42½; Boston, fourth, 42; Washington, fifth, 24; St. Louis, sixth, 20; Chicago, seventh, 19; Philadelphia, eighth, 7.

The Athletics, whose championship line-up has been gradually torn down to nothing, were the only team to be unanimously selected for any one position.

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	Total votes
Detroit	5	2	0	0	0	0	0	0	54
New York	2	0	2½	2½	0	0	0	0	43½

Statements from each manager follow:

Mickey Cochrane, Tigers—Our chances of winning a third straight are excellent provided we have the same good fortune in escaping injuries that we have had in the last two years.

Joe McCarthy, Yankees—The Tigers and Yanks are the two best teams. I figure the Yanks will win 95 games, which should capture the flag. Gehrig, Gomez and Dickey flopped last year and Crosetti was out the last 62 games. The return to form of these four will make the Yanks a different club.

Steve O'Neill, Indians—The Indians have as good a chance as any team. Detroit will be our most formidable rival.

Joe Cronin, Boston Red Sox—It will be a four-club race. It is a a tossup who'll win. Naturally the Tigers are favorites. The Red Sox have added punch.

Bucky Harris, Nats—Washington will be a trouble-maker and a possible contender. It has youth, hustle and hitting power. The pitching is uncertain, but if we don't have seven .300 hitters in our batting order I'll be surprised.

Jimmy Dykes, White Sox—I think the White Sox will finish fifth. I have a good pitching staff, but my outfield needs strengthening. I pick the Tigers to win again.

Connie Mack, Athletics—The race for the pennant should be the best in history, with all clubs having a chance to win. The Athletics will fool many of the wise boys who already have counted them out.

Night Play Leads From Start to Win Bowie Feature in Mud

Daily Double Returns $70.80

Balkos Maid, Currants Prove the Lucky Combination.

Sand Froid Takes 2d, Coming Back, Tenless, Sun Way Score.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

BOWIE RACE TRACK, Md., April 9.—Night Play, from the Bomar Stable, picked a dark and dreary afternoon to run an excellent race to win the Single-foot Purse, a dash of 6 furlongs that provided the feature spot at this Prince Georges County track. The black colt, appropriately named for his parents, Chance Play and Shades of Night, made every post a winning one to lead Chester Bild's Vitascope home by a margin of a length. Another half-length away came H. W. Jackson's Captain Jinks to take third money.

Night Play ran the route in 1:14, creditable time over a track that was nearing the muddy stage from a rain that began with a drizzle before the first race and was nearing a shower rating as the field of eight marched postward. Despite the conditions, some 6,000 were in and under the stands.

Victory Anticipated.

There was no secret about Night Play. His victory was anticipated, the bettors showing a keen liking for ticket No. 8850. At one stage of the wagering, Night Play showed at 1 to 2 on the odds board and finally paid off at the slightly better price of $3.30.

The daily double brought a return of $70.80 for the usual deuce investment. The winning combination was that of Balko's Maid, half of the Vanderbilt entry, and Currants.

The Vanderbilt entry of Balko's Maid and Bergere ran one-two in the day's opening sprint for juveniles. Balko's Maid wrested the lead from Lady Day soon after the break and went on to lead the remainder of the way while Bergere came from far back. Lady Day was headed out of third money by Trina, one that broke last and ran an excellent race thereafter. Due to the two-entry horses dominating the race, the Vanderbilt pair paid $5.20 to win and $6.50 to place.

Sang Froid Scores.

Sang Froid, capably ridden by Jockey Lynch despite a slipping saddle, won the second race to end the winning streak of Acautaw, which ran for the first time in the colors of Chester Bild, the Washingtonian. Apprehend was third in the field of six. Acautaw went to the front to battle with Apprehend while Sang Froid was saving ground. The latter, however, came with a rush at the end despite the fact that his jockey was of little help.

Currants, owned and trained by Danny Shea, triumphed in the third race, another sprint. The Dominant gelding proved Jockey Bobby Jones' first winner of the meeting and paid a substantial $13.60 mutuel. The winner had some trouble shaking off Tell It, a long shot which finished second ahead of Abbot's Last, a Vanderbilt hope. Boocord, a slight favorite over Abbot's Last, finished fourth, but did not appear to like the going.

The final three races of the program run in the rain proved easy victories for Coming Back, Tenless and Sun Way. Bobby Jones rode Coming Back and Tenless to bring his day's successes to three.

Balko' Maid leads the field across the finish line in the initial event on the Bowie card yesterday, a 4-furlong race for 2-year-old maiden fillies. A stablemate, Bergere, finished second. Jockey Bejshak, astride the winner (No. 5), appears to be pulling up his mount almost before certain of victory.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BALKO'S MAID (entry), $5.20, $6.50, $4.00; BERGERE (entry), $6.50, $4.00; TRINA, $2.70.

BALKO'S MAID settled in her stride quickly to gain command midway of the turn, drew into a clear lead when LADY DAY swerved entering the homestretch, saved ground, but had to be strongly ridden approaching the finish. BERGERE, racing green in the early stages, settled in her stride when reaching the straightway and closed with a tremendous rush on the outside. TRINA, slower than usual to gain her best stride, saved ground in the last quarter mile and closed resolutely. LADY DAY swerved when reaching the homestretch and faltered near the finish. DROWSY went well placed until reaching the homestretch, then tired after swerving badly when placed to punishment. TULEYRIES RUBY could not engage the leaders. CRUSHED ICE raced green. LANDSCAPE broke well, but raced very green and needs more education.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:07½. Winner, Mrs. N. E. Doyle's b. g. (6), by Kai Sang—Sardonyx. Trained by W. Durnan. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:13 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SANG FROID, $6.10, $3.10, $2.40; ACAUTAW, $3.70, $2.70; APPREHEND, $2.80.

SANG FROID, suited by the footing and rated off the pace for the first half mile, challenged strongly when reaching the homestretch, came through between the leaders in the closing furlong, assumed command in the last sixteenth and was going away under pressure. ACAUTAW was hurried into the lead, stalled off repeated efforts from APPREHEND, but could not withstand the winner. APPREHEND forced a steady pace from the beginning and held on courageously in the closing test. DOWDY DELL went well placed, but failed to threaten when put to a hard drive. WAR STRIPES suffered interference midway of the backstretch and could not menace thereafter.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Wire to post at 3:36. Off at 3:38. Winner, D. Shea's ll. b. g. (4), by Dominant—Bittersweet. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:14 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CURRANTS, $13.60, $6.10, $4.40; TELL IT, $9.70, $4.80; ABBOT'S LAST, $3.80.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $70.80.

CURRANTS, favoring the footing and a strong factor during the early running, displaced TELL IT when reaching the turn, saved ground in the late stages and won under stout urging. TELL IT sprinted into a clear lead in the opening three furlongs, rallied nicely when challenged and was racing gamely at the end. ABBOT'S LAST, in tight quarters for the first three furlongs, obtained racing room on the outside and finished full of run. BOOCORD moved up menacingly at the turn, but weakened after a strong bid. VANDA CERULEA was hurried into a forward position early, but was not good enough in the final issue. JOBAKHETA suffered early interference.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. The Singlefoot. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:04. Off at 4:08. Winner, Bomar Stable's blk. c. (3), by Chance Play—Shades of Night. Trained by R. E. Potts. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48, 1:14.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHT PLAY, $3.30, $2.60, $2.30; VITASCOPE, $3.50, $2.80; CAPTAIN JINKS, $3.00.

NIGHT PLAY, at home in the footing and away forwardly to take command shortly after the start, moved into a winning lead when reaching the homestretch and had enough in reserve to withstand VITASCOPE. Latter raced prominently from the beginning, moved up gamely when put to a strong drive and came very fast in the closing test. CAPTAIN JINKS improved his position steadily in the last half mile after being outrun early, and was racing strongly at the close. GALLOGLASS went forwardly and had no excuses. UNDULATE began tiring after going a half mile.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:34. Off at 4:35. Winner, Danny Shea's b. or br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COMING BACK, $6.00, $3.00, $2.10; RED BADGE, $3.30, $2.10; MAD FRUMP, $2.30.

COMING BACK, taken in hand when unable to stay with RED BADGE, went to the pacemaker readily when shaken up at the final bend, took command without effort entering the homestretch and finished with much in reserve. RED BADGE opened up a long lead when straightened into the backstretch, went along smoothly, but failed to rally when challenged and was under a tenacious drive to stall off MAD FRUMP. Latter permitted to settle in his stride before making his run, went up on the outside, but could not threaten seriously. PLAYOFF went along in the first flight for seven furlongs, then weakened. EATEMUP was badly outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:05. Winner, J. Coleman's blk. m. (5), by Bucellas—Rusila. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25, 0:51 3-5, 1:19 3-5, 1:45 3-5, 1:53 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TENLESS, $11.30, $4.10, $3.70; LONE HAND, $2.70, $2.60; JUST REMEMBER, $4.50.

TENLESS, hustled to the first turn to obtain a forward position, followed TULEYRIES WAND under steadying restraint until leaving the backstretch, took command at the last turn and drew out readily through the stretch drive. LONE HAND, rated within striking distance of the leaders and on the outside, finished gamely when forced to a drive. JUST REMEMBER continued strongly after moving into contention midway of the backstretch. TULEYRIES WAND had good speed for six furlongs, then tired when overtaken. IRISH VOTE was pinched back when the break came and was never able to enter contention. IN ADVANCE was done after six furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:30. Off at 5:30½. Winner, Miss Amil Booker's b. g. (5), by Sun God II—Danceaway. Trained by F. Booker. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25, 0:50 3-5, 1:17 2-5, 1:44 3-5, 1:59 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN WAY, $6.30, $3.70, $2.50; PATIENT SAINT, $5.20, $3.40. LUCKY TURN, $3.80.

SUN WAY, slow to find his best speed, moved up threateningly after a half mile, disposed of PATIENT SAINT without effort entering the stretch and drew clear with ease. PATIENT SAINT raced EUDES into submission early, drew out into a good lead, but was no match for the winner. LUCKY TURN, far back in the early racing, made up some ground, but was passing tired horses.

Bowie Race Track, April 9.

Dear Al:

The press-box messenger boy, dubbed "Poison," was responsible for the best laugh produced in the press box today. Mickey Brooks, master of ceremonies, called the youngster who is not up on the whys and wherefores of the mutuel department. "Boy," said Mickey, "get me a $6 combination." The boy grabbed the money and darted toward the door. "Hey," yelled Mickey, "who you going to bet that dough on?" The boy answered with a surprised look, "Why, I'm going to bet it on C mbination, of course." Clocker Mike has been going good over in the other column. He has given five specials since the meeting started. Three have won, one ran third and the other was scratched. For the second day he beat me today, his Coming Back taking the measure of my Red Badge. However, the head of the firm had three—out of seven, of course. BILL.

First race—The Jacobs-Adrians entry of B. J. Brennan and Aura seems to have found the right spot here. The first named is the chief reliance. Stool Pigeon has a lot of speed and could surprise even though having no particular liking for an off-track. Peter Pumpkin for the show and a possible surprise.

Second race—Bally Bay shapes up well in this company. Gets in with only 111 pounds, thanks to the apprentice allowance. Parva Stella and Canrock for the other awards. The last named is running into condition.

Third race—Tweedy missed last out when the heavy money was down. Did not have any of the best of the racing luck on that occasion. I look for a victory tomorow. Malispina is the one to beat. Traitress for the show.

Fourth race—Smear may be ready to beat a cheap field of this sort despite an apprentice rider. Candle Fly's last was encouraging. Bright Bird could take the heat if in good shape. River Rose has an outside chance.

Fifth race—Warren, Jr. has run two creditable races here and is the logical choice in this field despite the top weight assignment. The Mauler, a brisk worker, should not be worse than second. Xandra for the show.

Sixth race—Strophe, could surprise in this group. Loves the mud and appears to be ready. Phrixus and Double Finesse for the place and show.

Stellar Field of 50 Poised for Richmond Golf Open Today

Cruickshank Is Tourney Favorite

$3,000 Play Draws Ten Entries From D. C.; 1st Prize Is $750.

By Dave Herman.

A Staff Correspondent.

RICHMOND, Va., April 9.—Some 50 professional and amateur golfers, including a goodly sprinkling of the field that battled in the Bobby Jones Masters' championship at Augusta, were poised here today, ready to rain high explosives in the form of pars and birdies over the James River course of the Country Club of Virginia tomorrow and Saturday in the Richmond Open.

Heading the parade of stars is Horton Smith, the versatile Joplin Ghost, whose sensational sub-par triumph in the Masters' tournament, which ended Monday, makes him a marked man of this 72-hole championship.

Cruickshank Held One to Beat.

Cruickshank holds the course record with a 66, five under par, and it is doubtful if this will be eclipsed.

The field has a distinct international tinge, for on the scene today were the clever Japanese stars, Torchy Toda and Chick Chin, and the Canadian blaster, Jules Huot, of Quebec.

Eight Washington golfers were in town tonight, but at least two more are expected tomorrow. In addition to Cox, who is playing good enough golf to win the championship, there are Leo Walper, the Bethesda driving range professor; Russ Hollebaugh and Maury Fitzgerald, Kenwood amateurs; Jim Lee, Kenny Corcoran and Charlie Pettyjohn, members of Georgetown University's golf team.

Rain this afternoon crimped all serious practice rounds, and the golfers are praying there won't be a repetition of the Augusta rain jinx. Cox arrived this morning and brushed up on the soggy course. He plays tomorrow at 9:12 with Dickie Metz and Dawson, both of Chicago.

8:48-1:24—Jim Lee (Washington), Sammy Baker (Fredericksburg) and Jim Barnett (Richmond).

Mr. Emil Dusek Ap pears in Some Pain

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

LARGE croakers are being caught by the commercial fishermen as far north as Reedsville, Va. Millions of these hardheads, ranging up to 3 pounds, are being shipped inland by netters who state that the season is at least two weeks advanced over previous seasons.

No reason is given for their early arrival. The heavy run of croakers will eliminate the expected run of shad and herring, which has been very meager in the upper Potomac. Weakfish will follow in the wake of the croakers with the murderous, quick-striking bluefish immediately behind. Not close enough, however, to interfere with sport fishing for either hardhead or trout.

Don't get over-excited about the arrival of the hardheads, because it will be some time yet before they will touch any lure, live or otherwise. Perhaps May 1 will record the first catches.

Channel bass fishing at Oregon Inlet continues to improve. Mrs. Duvall, proprietor of the Fort Raleigh Hotel, Manteo, N. C., advises this writer of the biggest demand in the history of sport fishing in the inlet for guides and accommodations.

If you plan to visit either Wanchez of Manteo during early spring, through June, write for reservations now. Don't miss good fishing because of procrastination—use the list of reliable boatmen published herein Thursday.

During the warm summer months when awaiting favorable change in the elements which might otherwise ruin a good fishing trip, much fun can be had near shore "bobbing" for eels. This used to be a pretty sporty pastime without stint to thousands of fishermen some years ago, and perhaps still in use by those who enjoy eel fishing.

The tackle is as simple as tackle can be. It consists of a hefty line which would be hard to snarl or tangle too readily, a basket or bag, a lantern and a can of tough marsh worms. After placing knots in the line, spaced about three feet apart, starting from the lower end and extending for a distance of 10, to 15 feet, prepare the bait; which, by the way, is best done before getting into the boat.

The next step is to get some strong, coarse thread and a long needle, and after threading about three feet of the thread through the needle—single thread — run the needle lengthwise through the worms until one has a string about 30 inches long.

The method of fishing is simple. Lower the line over the side and feed out sufficient to allow the bait to reach bottom, noting how many knots pass through your fingers on the way down. The eel is equipped with fine teeth and when he takes your bait, generally takes a firm hold—you readily recognize the bite through the line. Now steadily, without jerking, recover the line, knot after knot, until you know that the eel is just below the surface of the water along the side of the boat. A quick jerk over the side and your catch finds himself suspended in thin air, when he immediately opens his jaws and drops into the boat.

Rock Creek Tourney Entries Close Tomorrow

Entries for the Rock Creek spring golf tournament, first big public links event of the season, will close with Ed Burns, course manager, tomorrow. Already Burns has received more than 50 entries, and predicts a starting field of 100 for Monday's 18-hole qualifying round.

Claude Rippy, District municipal champion; George Malloy, Ted Burrows, Charlie Ficco and Bob Leapley, will be among the better known golfers participating.

Match play will be held Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Detton Downs Dusek in 23½ Minutes

Emil Unable to Approach Victor's Class in One-Sided Struggle.

By George Considine.

IN A one-sided display of dermatuggery Dangerous Dean Detton adroitly destroyed despicable Emil Dusek last night in the feature of the weekly wrestling show at the Turner Arena. Nigh on to 2,300 rasslegoers braved the inclement weather to look on.

The destruction, so-called, required just 23½ minutes and was climaxed when Detton whirled his husky adversary into the ropes as one might throw a discus. And catching him on the rebound, the same Detton kerplunked him down very neatly indeed.

Only on rare occasions throughout the comparatively short exhibition was Dusek able to approach Detton's class. And, alas, on those rare occasions the huge crowd was so partisan that it demanded that Emil be disqualified for ruffling the hair of Detton's Vanity Fair head.

It all started tamely enough. Sporting their Sunday leers, the boys came together majestically and spent the first five minutes endeavoring to prove that they could tame each other with an icy stare.

Obviously realizing that the customers were already getting a bit bored. Dangerous Dean wound up in the corner liquor store and smashed poor li'l Emil all over the rostrum. On one of his numerous flights through the ropes Dusek straightened out into a beautiful swan dive.

By the 15-minute mark, Dangerous Dean was slapping poor li'l Emil around so much that the latter gent took refuge in flight. It was sort of amusing to see Dusek sprinting around the cushioned square with Detton half-length back and the rotund Referee Cyclone Burns bringing up the rear.

District Loop Pin Title Won By Heurich

THE Heurich Brewers won the championship of the District League last night at the Convention Hall alleys by scoring an impressive 2-to-1 decision over the Occidental Restaurant team, last year's title-holders.

Deadlocked for the lead before the match, an odd game victory by either team was needed to decide the championship. Occidental got the jump by winning the first game by 20 pins but took a severe lacing in the latter two when the Brewers chalked up two games over the 600 mark.

Joe Harrison, individual average champion for the past two seasons, dropped his crown to Joe Freschi, of Grand Central Valet, when he dropped below his average with a 340 set. Freschi shot 343 to top the Occidental star by 36 pins.

Schuman Wins D.C. Table Tennis Title

Elias Schuman withstood the fighting challenge of Manny Moskowitz, New Jersey State champion, to win the District table tennis title for the second consecutive year last night at Wardman before some 500 spectators. The scores were 21—9, 21—15, 20—22 and 21—15.

The match was featured by Moskowitz' amazing rally in the third game, when, with his back to the wall at 12—18, the curly-headed Jerseyite threw caution to the winds and banged the little celluloid ball with increased vigor.

On three different occasions Manny had to dive into the grandstand 20 feet back of the table to retrieve successfully. He deuced the game at 20-all with a screaming placement and then went on to win the game, only to be turned back in the fourth game by Schuman's airtight play.

Woodward & Lothrop, Kann's in Bowling Tie

Woodward & Lothrop moved into a tie with S. Kann Sons for the championship of the Department Store League, last night at the Recreation alleys, swamping Jelleff's while Kann's were bowing twice to Hecht Co. and whitewashing Jelleff's in a postponed set.

The league winds up its season next week when Woodward & Lothrop meet Lansburgh's in a postponed match. Three victories are needed by the former to win the flag. Two wins will give Kann's the pennant by reason of their greater pinfall.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

50 Local Pinmen Go to Hartford

Close to 50 District duckpin bowlers departed for Hartford, Conn., this morning to participate in the National Duckpin Bowling Congress championships. Tonight, which has been labeled by the tournament committee as "Washington night," winds up the schedule for local bowlers and it will be their last chance to grab some of the honors which so far have been away beyond their reach.

Only the city's fair-sex stars have made a creditable showing to date, the Lucky Strike Girls setting the pace among the women's teams and Catherine Quigley topping the singles scores.

The local invaders have their work cut out for them with tournament records having been chalked up by their early competitors. Two of Connecticut's foremost teams, the famous Blue Ribbons of Willimantic and the Connecticut Yankees of Hartford, are also scheduled to roll their games tonight, and many of the top scores will be jeopardized when these strong teams swing into action.

Police Club Midget Nines to Meet Tonight

A meeting of managers of teams in the Police Boys Club midget baseball league will be held tonight at 8 p. m. at No. 5 Precinct Boys Club, Fifth and E streets southeast. Teams, whose players will not have reached their seventeenth birthday by June 1, 1936, are eligible to enter the league. The Police Boys Club invites other Boys Club teams and independent nines to enter the loop. President Morris Fox will preside.

Building of 18-Hole Course Is Woodmont Club's Big Aim

MEL KRAFT.

(This is the seventh of a series of articles dealing with prospects for 1936 at Washington and nearby golf courses.)

By Dave Herman.

WOODMONT COUNTRY CLUB members are more concerned with the building of an additional nine than they are with their own performances in District golf tournaments.

For Woodmont golfers are dead serious about having an 18-hole course. Their nine-hole layout is one of the most picturesque in the Middle Atlantic section, and the manufacturing of pars and birdies is no easy task.

In the clubhouse there hangs an architect's drawing of the proposed second nine. Members gaze at it, and ask themselves, "How long before we will actually be able to play it?"

Club officials say it will be a matter of two years.

Best golfing prospect is Mel Kraft, who is 24. Kraft is the club champion, and no champion is more deserving of his laurels. Up from the caddy ranks, Kraft has improved his game tremendously in the last two years.

Crossing paths with Howard Nordlinger in the club finals last fall, Kraft set the eight-time titleholder on his ears with a rousing victory, 2 and 1. He shot good golf to break the Nordlinger monopoly.

Kraft has a free, easy flowing swing, and, in the opinion of the strawberry-thatched pro, Gene Larkin, the recent bridegroom, is one of the best putters around town. Nordlinger discovered that.

Woodmont doesn't possess a great amount of top-flight golfers. Both Kraft and Nordlinger are week-end golfers, and would be 40 per cent better if they could play every day. Dr. Milt Harris, once runner-up for the club title; Louis Harris, Les Olian, Bobby, Gus Ring and Charlie Schulman are the boys who break 80 with consistency.

Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, club champion, ranks first among the women. Miss Bertha Israel, Mrs. Theodore Peyser, Mrs. Jack Schulman, Mrs. Lou Harris and Mrs. Gil Hahan are members of Woodmont's first team.

Roger Peacock, of Congressional, won last year's Woodmont invitation. He holds the course mark with a 68. Larkin holds the pro record with 67, and Mrs. David Clark, of Army and Navy, the women's with 79.

Woodmont's nine holes keep you guessing. Deception causes scores to skyrocket. Ben Bernie, the Ole Maestro, played the course last Sunday with Lou Harris. Next day he became ill. Those greens will get you, Maestro.

Heavy Track Schedule at Central

DIM shades of the past, when Central High was a champion in track and field instead of an "also ran," are possibly flitting around Central Stadium these days. The "new deal" schedule of the school for this season may have something to do with it.

Certainly the Central schedule below stands out conspicuously among those of the city's other five schools. A sharp contrast it is to the Central schedules of the past number of years when a few boys have been entered in the "C" Club and inter-high meets somewhat as a matter of form.

Although Tech, entered in seven meets, including the Penn Relays, as usual has the most ambitious season mapped out, Central's six meets are even more surprising. Time was when Central's track activities consisted of two meets.

Roosevelt also is hitting the comeback trail, or, rather, blazing a new one, for the school did not have a track team until Coach Lynn Woodworth came out with one last year. This year the Rough Riders are entered in six meets, and possibly seven, in addition to a practice meet with Episcopal.

With Eastern entered in six meets and Western in five, high school track and field for the year is well rounded out.

Central.

May 2, Maryland Interscholastic, at College Park; 9, Tome Institute Scholastic meet, at Port Said, Md.; 16, Central "C" Club meet, at Central High Stadium; 23, open; 29, Interhigh meet, at Central Stadium.

May 2, Maryland Interscholastics; 6, dual meet with Maryland Freshmen, at College Park; 9, Tome Institute Scholastic meet, at Port Said, Md.; 16, Central "C" Club meet, at Central Stadium; 29, Interhigh meet.

Eastern.

May 2, Maryland Interscholastics, at College Park; 9, Tome Institute Interscholastic meet, at Port Said, Md.; 16, Central "C" Club meet, at Central, stadium; 29, Interhigh meet, at Central Stadium.

Terp Stickmen Play Alumni Tomorrow

Once All-Americans, in Not-so-Good Condition, Will Be in Line-up.

A COLLECTION of ancient, if not venerable, Maryland lacrosse men from the mid-Victorian period will wheel themselves out on the pitch tomorrow at College Park to prove to the 1936 Old Line varsity that the game isn't what it used to be when they were undergraduates. The excuse for their appearance is the traditional varsity-alumni match, an annual feature of the Terps' schedule.

The call to alumni colors has been heard by men who were swatting opponents with their webbed shillalahs as long as ten years ago, most of whom were All-American selections at some time during their colorful careers. A small army of candidates is expected to defend the alumni honor and all will be used, if last year's fracas is a criterion of what to expect. Fallen arches, protruding tummies and a decided lack of wind usually necessitate the use of at least three alumni teams to finish the match.

Heading the prize list of antique timber will be Willie Pugh, three times All-American center, now a student in the dental school. Others scheduled to appear include "Gabby" Street, "Slu" Kelly, Emil Zalesak, Bus Pfau, Fred Invernizzi, "Empty" Loane, "Sad Sam" Nicholson, Joe Deckman, Sammy Crosswaite, "Chief" Beatty, "Moon" Evans, Doug Smink, "Smoky" Woods, George Hockensmith, Len Rombro, Corky Snyder, "Irish" Loughran, Herman Epstein, "Skip" Faber, and Jimmy Lee.

Meet Maestro Michael Jacobs:

He Looks Like a Farmer But Rules the Pugs

By Paul Mickelson.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Meet Mike Jacobs, once a newsie on the sidewalks of New York and now the promotional dictator of the heavyweight boxing industry:

Mike made money from the very day he first hawked newspapers. Shrewd and likable, he made valuable contacts when a kid in knee breeches. He ran a steamboat excursion line and became a ticket broker, lining his net with gold. But three sheets of legal paper, the exclusive contract to promote all of Joe Louis' fights from 1935 to '40, made him dictator of Cauliflower Row and left Madison Square Garden bigwigs on the outside looking in. Mike says he would sell the Louis contract for $300,000, but he doesn't say it very loudly. The guess is he wouldn't.

He's a dead ringer for a farmer on his first visit to the county fair. Wears glasses, stands 5 feet 11, wheels about his office slowly and smacks his chops incessantly. He's the biggest one-man business organization in New York, his own board of directors, president and secretary. Keeps all his records and plans under his felt hat. Prides himself at being able to recall faces years after he has seen them.

Sees an average of 100 persons daily, working from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m. in his office, boxlike and small, is intriguing with 50 pictures and cartoons of fighters, managers and promoters, most of them from the present era. Prize is an unfinished portrait of his old partner, the late Tex Rickard. Daily, he looks for the artist to come back to finish it. Doesn't know where he is. Two pictures, one of his mother and the other of Brown Bomber Louis, adorn his desk. A bottle of red ink always can be found on the flat-topped desk—strange as it seems for a man whose business is deep in black ink.

Mike claims ownership of a big wardrobe—35 suits, six overcoats, six topcoats, 23 hats and 3,000 neckties among other things. His shoes are made to order. Buys his ties in lots of a hundred. Gives them away by the score, mostly kids. Yet he looks far from a fashion plate, confessing he has suits he never thinks of wearing. Smokes two packs of cigarettes and an occasional cigar daily. Likes movies—to sleep and think in. Slips into two-bit flicker houses almost every day without looking at the outside bills and snoozes.

Is married. No children. Has ritzy apartment in Manhattan and a beautiful country home near Rumson, N. J. Chief delight is to putter around his garden (not Madison Square Garden). Wild roses and tulips are principal horticultural loves of Mike. Estimates 6,000 tulips are growing in his garden. Lover of dogs and cats. An avid reader of sport pages. Can name sports writers of almost every town over 10,000 in United States. Doesn't care about books.

Rates himself one of best cooks in country and his "Mike Jacobs Sauce" for clam bake dishes the best. Got recipe for the sauce from an old doctor. Refuses to give it to his best friends. Doesn't play golf, but did until he sprained a right leg ligament seven years ago. Was a 100 shooter. Drives a car. Six hundred miles in one day was his best and longest run.

Principal business philosophy is "never let anything surprise you." Millions of dollars are lost every year by business executives, says Mike, because they don't know how to cope with upsets, surprises.

"When I first started selling newspapers," philosophizes Mike, "I learned never to be surprised at anything. Once went to a surprise party, but it looked so foolish I went home early. If you let anything surprise you, why you won't know what to do when you have to act fast. Take my contract with Louis for instance. It's one of my best business moves, maybe my best. What would I do if something happened to Joe? I've got schemes, I have. I'd be ready."

France Loses $110,220,000 Gold in Week

Reserve Coverage Drops From 70.2 Per Cent to 67.42 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 9.—The Bank of France statement today disclosed withdrawals of gold worth 1,670,000,000 francs ($110,220,000) during the week ended April 3.

This huge withdrawal followed a los of 114,000,000 francs ($7,524,000) in gold during the previous week at the time of the war scare, when France was insisting that Hitler withdraw his troops from the Rhineland.

The bank raised its discount rate to 5 per cent from 3½ per cent on March 28, indicating that withdrawals of gold were reaching the stage which was dangerous to the backing of French bank notes.

Financial authorities said the losses consequently subsided and that they believed they were halted.

The gold reserve dropped in two weeks from 65,700,000,000 to 63,917,000,000 francs ($4,336,200,000 to $4,218,522,000). The coverage on sight obligations dropped from 70.2 per cent to 67.42 per cent.

At the same time, the currency circulation increased from 82,681,000,000 to 84,581,000,000 francs.

This increase and other changes reported in the bank statement were said in financial circles to have been caused by government borrowing, either directly or through banks that discounted government paper.

Leading Exchanges Closed for Holiday

New York, April 9 (AP).—Financial and commodity markets in all leading domestic and foreign centers will close tomorrow in observance of Good Friday. Exceptions will be the new York poultry, dairy, bar silver, foreign exchange and potato markets; Boston wool; St. Louis stock exchange, and Federal reports of the various livestock markets.

Most of the financial exchanges in this country will resume business for the short session on Saturday, but all European markets will remain suspended until Tuesday. A number of commodity markets in New York will also remain closed Saturday, including coffee and sugar, cocoa, cottonseed oil, tobacco, metals, silk, hides, rubber, cotton and wool.

Calumet & Hecla Resumes Dividend

New York, April 9 (AP).—Directors of Calumet & Hecla Consolidated Copper Co. today resumed payments on the capital stock with a dividend of 25 cents. This is the first since June 30, 1930.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Recede in Moderate Trading; Bonds Turn Duller; Dollars Hold Firm.

New York, April 10.—Stocks lost heart a bit before the close and early irregularity gave way to weakness in most industrial sections. A handful of stocks picked out for special attention were pushed down 1 to 3 points, but fractional changes were the rule. Stock turnover was around 1,700,000 shares. Bonds were dull. May wheat closed five-eighths of a cent lower at 94½ cents a bushel. Cotton was steady.

In stocks the only real buoyancy, outside the U. S. Rubber issues, was shown by Case Threshing, which rushed up more than a half a dozen points. Steel issues were fractionally lower in spite of a good tonnage shipment report for March made by U. S. Steel. Railroad shares generally were firm, as were public utilities. Oil prices were steady.

Airplane shares had a poor day, the market apparently disliking the first-page publicity. Douglas was knocked down 4 points or so. Losses of 1 to 3 points were suffered by Detroit & Mackinac, Eastman, General Outdoor Advertising, Gillette preferred, Manville, Libby-Owens-Ford, Panhandle Producing preferred, and Vulcan Detinning. Gains of a similar amount were made in Curtis Publishing, American Safety Razor and Greyhound.

In the miscellaneous group, Coty sank into new low ground. Radio receded a fraction. Baldwin issues sought and found new low prices. Floansbee Brothers, also in receivership, broke 2 points on small volume. Schenley was heavy, as were most of the liquor stocks. Industrial Alcohol was an exception.

Trade Improvement.

Now that the American Iron & Steel Institute provides a reliable weekly estimate of the operating rate for the steel industry, the monthly figures on shipments given by the United States Steel Corporation are of less significance than formerly, and certainly create less commotion in the markets than did the former monthly reports on new orders booked. This week in particular, with numerous steel company executives telling their stockholders what they could of the situation, the Steel Corporation's shipment figures fail to stir much interest.

They showed, nevertheless, with a gain of 107,237 tons over the preceding month, that the flood interruptions to shipments were much less than might have been expected. Even on a daily basis the March shpiments were more than 8 per cent greater than those for February and they were nearly 20 per cent above a year ago. Shipments for the month were the best for any month since June, 1934. The record clearly shows that business recovery has gathered considerable momentum, and that it cannot be stopped by merely local disturbances, however severe they may be.

On the occasion of annual meetings, stockholders are hearing from their company managements on current operating results. Numerous companies are enjoying an even better percentage gain than that reported for United States Steel. Some increases in March businehs as reported yesterday, for instances, ran as high as 30 to 40 per cent over a year ago. All that is encouraging as pointing to business recovery, but the high percentage gains are apt to be misleading. They show improvement from low points, and at current rate of operation and earnings American industry still is some distance from full prosperity, as the high level of unemployment clearly shows.

Financial Strain.

Foreign exchanges were rather steady, largely owing to operations of the American and British control funds and the lack of interest shown by foreign speculators, incident to the holidays. This week's report of the Bank of France reveals figures which to some may appear disquieting. Discounts increased hugely again and are now the highest on record, which indicates hoarding of funds and flight of capital, confirmed by the drop of 1,670,000,000 francs in gold.

No large amounts of gold have been exported, so that the bulk has been earmarked. Circulation also increased greatly. However, it can only be repeated that the difficulty of the franc now is largely psychological. People are hoarding currency, and capital is going abroad because of fear of devaluation. On strictly economic grounds the necessity for devaluation now looks much less pressing than it did a year ago, for prices in France have moved down nearer parity with world prices.

The prospect for heavier expenditures for defense and the continued treasury deficits, made good by inflationary processes, are doing the damage to confidence. Meanwhile, the treasury is arranging for fresh foreign loans, this time with Holland, having run through the recent British credit in short order. That gold holdings at the Bank of France have been maintained as well as they have suggests that some large imports have been coming from Italy, the financial position of which country also has worsened.

First to Report.

The Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. turns out to be the first important corporation to publish a report for first quarter. Some may regard it as a bad omen that the first report shows a decline in profits as compared with the same period of last year, but the statement nevertheless reflected improved business. Lower net profits were due to higher taxes, higher wages and larger depreciation charges. The tax outlook certainly is getting no better, but for many industrial companies the profits in first quarter will turn out to have been greater than a year ago.

Railroad Earnings.

The first of the railroad earnings statements for March—that of the Alton—is due this week. The reports as a whole will be considerably affected by the floods, which cut down freight carloadings to about the level of a year ago, and which seriously interrupted passenger service in the East, where it is heaviest. Just the same, railroad earnings for the month are expected to show another gain over the corresponding period of a year ago.

Ups and Downs.

Radio common and preferred continue weak. . . . Baldwin issues are selling about as much out of line as ever. Stated in one way, if the bonds are selling at about the proper price, the preferred is too high, and if the preferred is too high, or even at its proper price, the common certainly is too high.

Am. Smelting Net Is Running At $5 A Share

Two Months' Business For I. B. M. Sets New High Record.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.—Earnings of American Smelting & Refining Co. ran at the rate of nearly $5 a share annually in January and February, F. H. Brownell, chairman, told stockholders at the annual meeting today. He added that he saw no reason why the same good showing should not continue in March. Earnings in February were at the annual rate of $4.96 a share, compared with $1.06 in the same month last year, the chairman stated, and in January they approximated $4.97, against $2.90 a year earlier.

Copper prices should soon be higher, Brownell said, adding that he believed there was no justification for the present low price of domestic copper. Consumption has increased to the point where stocks are now on a normal lever, he said.

International Business Machines.

New York, April 9 (AP).—Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines Corporation, stated at the annual stockholders meeting today that the company's business in the first two months of 1935 were ahead of any like period in its history. Profits in the first two months of the current year, he said, were about 9 per cent ahead of the similar 1935 period after taxes.

In answer to a stockholder's question, Watson said that President Roosevelt's proposed corporation taxes on the basis of International Business Machines' 1935 record would mean additional taxes of $31,000 to the company. Shareholders approved an increase in authorized capital stock to 1,000,000 shares from 750,000.

General Electric Orders.

Schenectady, N. Y., April 9 (AP).—Orders received by the General Electric Co. in the first quarter made the greatest total of any three-month period since the September quarter of 1931, Gerard Swope, president, announced today. They amounted to $59,569,879 against $49,379,932 for the March quarter last year, an increase of 21 per cent.

Libby, McNeill & Libby.

Chicago, April 9.—Ordinary net income of $1,920,832.27 for the year ending February 29, 1936, was reported to shareholders today by Libby, McNeill & Libby, food canners. In addition there was profit from the sale of certain capital assets, and after providing for general reserves, of $1,198,227.21 making the amount added to surplus before dividends $3,119,059.48. This compares to net income of $3,032,288.37 for the year ending March 2, 1935. Earned surplus at February 29, 1936, amounts to $3,034,198.29.

During the year the company adjusted its financial structure by an exchange of stock and settled in full the accumulated dividends on the old first preferred 7 per cent issue. Through this adjustment, a capital surplus of $3,130,480 was created.

American Radiator.

New York, April 9 (AP).—Clarence M. Woolley, chairman of American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation told stockholders at the annual meeting today that sales in the first quarter ran 30 per cent ahead of the same period last year. He told stockholders that negotiations had been going on with bankers looking to refunding the company's $10,000,000 of 4½ per cent bonds now outstanding.

Western Union.

New York, April 9 (AP).—Roy White, president of Western Union Telegraph Co. told sockholders at the annual meeting today that gross earnings in the first quarter of 1936 were probably 8 per cent ahead of the same period last year.

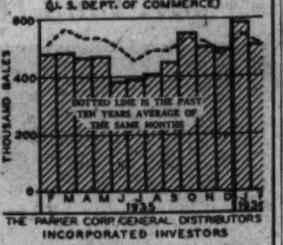
Japanese Cotton Imports Increase



Boston, Mass., April 9.—In the first two months of this year consumption of cotton in the mills of this country exceeded the same 1935 months by 7½ per cent. A condition not so good is that imports of foreign-made cotton cloth have materially increased in past months. A large part of these increased imports come from Japan.

Reserve Balances Gain $84,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The weekly condition statement of Federal reserve banks disclosed yesterday that a retransfer of Treasury cash to commercial banks caused member bank reserve balances to jump $84,000,000 during the week ended April 8.

The Treasury took $112,000,000 of its funds from reserve institutions during the period, which swelled total balances to $5,161,000,000. This was about $2,420,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

Money in circulation increased $22,000,000 during the week, which witnessed also the addition of $5,000,000 to the monetary gold stocks of the nations.

Test Launched To Extend Life By 'Slow' Diet

Rat's Life Lengthened to 150-Year Human Equivalent in Trials.

Ithaca, N. Y., April 9 (AP).—The riddle of extending the span of human life was attacked from a new angle, that of diet in the last half of adult life, in a six-year experiment, the beginning of which was announced today at Cornell University.

President Livingston Farrand made public a gift of $42,500 by the Rockefeller Foundation to support the new study for six years. The investigation is based on a Cornell discovery that the diets which science has hitherto concentrated upon, those for most rapid growth of the young, are antagonistic for longevity in rats.

The life span of these animals was increased by diets low in calories, diets the opposite of the "optimum" feeding for growth of the young.

Many Effects Noted.

Many body, bone and internal organ effects were noted as a result of the long-diets. The new study proposes to find out the meaning of these changes and whether some of them can be applied to adults not only to prolong life but to retain mental and physical vigor to the last.

The amount of exercise beneficial after middle life will receive special study. The investigations will be conducted in the laboratory of animal nutrition in the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell. They will be directed by Dr. L. A. Maynard, Dr. C. M. McCay and Dr. S. A. Asdell.

"The vast majority of the experiments upon which our current nutrition practices are based," an outline of the work states "have dealt with the young and growing organisms. The physiology which dominates the field of nutrition assumes that rapid growth is the ideal for maximum health, both during the growing period and during adult life. It also assumes that the facts found during growth period may serve as a guide for optimum nutrition throughout life.

"In studies made thus far we have obtained evidence that throws serious doubt on both these assumptions, and which suggests there is need for a long time study of the relationship of nutrition to the physiology and pathology of middle life and old age.

"The large role which nutrition plays in the ascending period has been extensively studied. Clearly nutrition must have a role also in connection with the senile changes of old age, but this period of the life span has been almost totally neglected."

By feeding rats diets restricted in calories, the Cornell nutritionist considerably increased the length of animals' lives. One male rat lived to the equivalent of 150 years for a man. These long-lived rats developed more slowly. They preserved youthful characteristics, such as fine silky hair and their activity for a longer time. Numerous other differences appeared.

Jewelry Store Holdup Nets Robbers $60,000

Dayton, Ohio, April 9 (AP).—Four robbers held up the Sol Partner jewelry store late today and escaped with silverware and jewels valued by the owners at $60,000.

One of the robbers stood guard at the door, while the other three leisurely cleaned out showcases and shelves after forcing Sol Partner, the proprietor and Albert Fornas, L. C. Lehman and Stanley Watson, clerks, to the rear of the place.

Accuser Recants Death Charge After 12 Years

Detroit, April 9 (AP).—Maneera Abass obtained her freedom today after waiting 12 years in prison for Ahmed Mohammed to recant his charge that she conspired with him to slay her husband, Hussan, devout leader of Detroit's Mohammedan colony.

The State pardon and parole board granted the 47-year-old Turkish woman her freedom on parole after Ahmed signed a statement absolving her of any connection with the crime and admitting he implicated her because he believed she had given police information against him.

Culbertson on Bridge

These Rumors!

There is a tale about me which will not down, despite the fact that regularly, in this paper, I express my willingness to answer all bridge questions gratis, free, and for nothing. The tale, briefly, is that some one sends me a bridge question, I answer it and accompany my answer with a bill for services rendered. The story varies only in the amount of the bill I am supposed to send. I am most flattered by the versions that value my service at not less than $50. When the price gets as low as $10 the story becomes merely irritating.

But although I answer all written questions from strangers without fee, I do charge my friends who ask me to listen to their tales of bridge woe, and the price of my attention varies all the way from a cup of coffee and a sandwich to a full-course banquet. These prices are far too low for some of the strange tales to which I must listen, but once in a great while I am told about a really entertaining hand. These I promptly pass along to you.

Results Are What Count.

"What would you bid," began my friend John Mattheys, and I immediately rang for the waiter. John, who is an excellent player, had a neatly folded piece of paper and was showing me only the South cards of the following hand.

East, dealer.

NORTH
♠ Q J 9
♥ A Q
♦ K 10 9
♣ A K 8 7 6

WEST	EAST.
♠ 6 5 4	♠ K 10 8
♥ 10	♥ K J 8 4 3
♦ A Q 8 6 5 4 3 2	♦ None
♣ J	♣ Q 10 5 3 2

SOUTH
♠ A 7 3 2
♥ 9 7 6 5 2
♦ J 7
♣ 9 4

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	4 diamonds	Double
Pass	?

I said I would pass, and John admitted that I would have obtained a good result, but not as good as he did. Here's the rest of the bidding that actually occurred:

East	South	West	North
Pass	4 hearts	Pass	Pass
Double	4 spades	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	Pass	Redouble (final bid)

West led the ace of diamonds and continued with a low diamond which East trumped. East returned a low club, South played small, and West's jack forced the king. The queen of spades was led and covered by the king, South winning with the ace. A spade was returned and, after careful consideration of the bidding, declarer decided the finesse probably couldn't win, so he went up with dummy's jack and was agreeably surprised by the fall of East's ten. The nine of spades now took out West's last trump. The contract still was far from made, but South now had an almost perfect count on West's hand, and decided to play for West to have had a singleton club and for East to make a grievous error.

He, therefore, led a low club and East put up the ten to win the trick. Unnerved by the way the hand was working out for his opponents, East made the frightful error for which declarer had hoped. Instead of returning a club he returned a heart. Dummy's queen won, the king of clubs was cashed, and the eight of clubs forced East's queen. South trumped, and dummy's cards all were high.

"What would you have done," I asked, "if East had ducked your second club lead completely, letting you win the trick with your nine?"
